TWO LOW WHITLEY BIDS REJECTED BY BOARD, CONTRACTOR PLANS SUIT TO GET UP CONTRACTS

GEORGIA FARMERS BACK TOBACCO ACT AT 50-TO-1 RATIO

Continuance of Regulation Through '35 Believed Assured, on Basis of Scattered Returns From Half Dozen States.

ACREAGE RATIO TO DECIDE ISSUE

First Counts Indicate Far More Than Required 75 Per Cent of Acreage Will Be Behind Measure.

By the Associated Press.

Tobacco farmers—on the basis of partial returns—yesterday voted strongly in favor of continuing compulsory control of their crop.

Returns from the referendum conducted in the large tobacco growing states were meager, but appeared to indicate to the farm administration officials that continuance of the Kerr-Smith act in 1935 had been approved. This was the second referendum conducted on crop control by compulsory action. A week ago cotton farmers voted, 9 to 1, for that method of control.

Georgia bright leaf tobacco farmers voted nearly 50 to 1 for the Kerr-Smith act on the basis of returns from more than 20 counties. Incomplete returns gave 13,795 for and 279 against. The affirmative vote represented 40,216 acres and the negative vote 758 acres, with 4,454 acres not voting.

In South Carolina complete returns showed 18,382 for the measure and 223 against.

A heavy majority in Tennessee for continuance of the act appeared certain, when, with 37 counties tabulated, tobacco growers had voted 20,037.41 acres in favor of the act, and 6,214.82 against.

Expression of personal wishes, regardless of acreage owned or cultivated, resulted in a vote of 21,777 in favor of the act, and 2,555 against.

Acreage Basis Used.

The act declares that farmers controlling at least 10 per cent of the total tobacco acreage must approve the proposal to extend it another year. Many of the first returns did not indicate what a percentage of acres was represented by favorable votes.

Under the act the farm administration makes individual allotments to farmers. Production in excess of the allotment is subject to a tax of one-third of its market value. These funds are used to finance a voluntary crop reduction program and to make benefit payments to farmers who cooperate.

States showing strong sentiment for continuance of the law were Kentucky, North and South Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, West Virginia, Missouri and Ohio. Three central Kentucky counties voted 2,993 to 146. The acres represented were not available. In Missouri the vote in Platte and Charlestown was 1,898 acres for and 140 acres against.

Started December 8.

The referendum started December 8, with county agents doing the tabulating. The results were to have been compiled yesterday, but difficulties were encountered in counting the votes. In some states an additional day was granted.

Principal types of tobacco controlled by the Kerr-Smith act include burley, flue-cured, fire-cured and dark air cured.

In Virginia it was announced that returns indicate that growers of flue-cured, fire-cured and burley tobacco have voted overwhelmingly in favor of

Acquitted

MARTIN INSULL.

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Martin Insull was acquitted of embezzlement charges today.

Prosecutors had failed for the third time to fix criminal responsibility for the collapse of the huge Insull power empire.

The jury filed into the crowded court chamber after six hours and 45 minutes of formal deliberation. Amid a tense silence they announced that they found the silver-haired defendant not guilty of stealing $344,720 from the Middle West Utilities Company he headed to carry on his private stock market operations.

TEN LITTLE HOMES ASSURED COMFORT DURING NEW YEAR

Drive's Success Impels Constitution To Offer Next Neediest Families. 11th Presented Today.

By RALPH T. JONES.

Grand news for 10 Atlanta families this morning—and the dawn of hope for others. The "Ten Opportunities" for the year have been provided for and in 10 little homes where so recently the dark angel of despair brooded with sable wings, happiness today is shedding its sunshine and smiles as mothers and children realize they can live together in decent comfort for another year.

Atlanta's early response this year to the Ten Opportunity appeal makes possible realization of a secret hope that has been tugging at the heart of this chronicler ever since the preparatory work for the campaign.

There are so many families in Atlanta this year who need, most desperately, a little help to bridge them over the coming 12 months. So many cases of splendid homes, of helpless women and their children, who face separation, hunger, tears and ruin if that help is not forthcoming.

Let us, Atlanta, provide for as many of them as possible.

Group Takes Third Family.

Full provision for the Ten Opportunities was assured when the Relief Service Group, that splendid organization of prominent women with Mrs. Evelyn Harris as chairman, "adopted" two more families, making a total of three Opportunities this group will care for during the year. Announcement of their acceptance of Opportunity Number One was made last week. Now they have taken five and eight in addition.

Opportunity Number Seven was accepted Friday by the Southern Freight Tariff Bureau, with offices in the 101 Marietta building, who have pooled their charity contributions for the year to make this possible.

Opportunity Number Nine, the other untaken family on Friday morning, is provided for out of the general fund which has grown splendidly during the past few days.

Elimination Was Difficult.

Selection of the 10 families which seemed to need the most help, at the same time, promised most help, did not respond in happiness, good citizenship and general all-around worthiness, developed into a heart-searing process of elimination. It was, literally, impossible to choose the neediest and worthiest 10.

So, at the end, the decision was, perhaps, the largest a group of 20, then, after many bitter decisions, these 200 were reduced to 20. No man can take any one of those 20 and say its need was greater, its call for aid more compelling than any of the remaining 18.

However, it had to be 10, so 10 were chosen. And it is a marvelous thing today, four days before the end of the campaign on Christmas morning, to be able to say that the 10 have been adopted.

Another Family Presented.

Today, in an adjoining column, is told the story of one of those other 10 families, the 10 who were of necessity the discarded when the original selection was made. Won't it be possible to provide for this family, to ease the pain of the mother, to smooth away from the mother's brow the line of anxious care and to rescue four fine little boys from the soul-destroying perils of the city streets?

Frankly, I have a little secret prayer that, somehow, the way will be opened to provide for all 20 of these families whose needs I have come to know so well.

But today the appeal is just for Family Number Eleven. Save these four boys from becoming young hoodlums and, probably, young criminals before they are 20 years of age. Keep their home together, provide the security that will permit them all to stay in school, in Sunday school, in church and to join in a splendid band they have set their hearts upon, the Boy Scouts.

Fine Youth in Making.

A few years from now, if this home is held together, it will probably be

Leland Harvey Is Freed, Unidentified in Line-Up

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Leland Harvey, a man who was held up in a holdup in Chicago, was freed today after a line-up of suspects failed to identify him.

Harvey, 35, was released from the Cook County Jail today after being held for three days. He was one of several men who were held up in a holdup in Chicago on December 18.

The holdup took place on the corner of Madison and Dearborn streets. Harvey and three other men were held up by a group of men who were armed with pistols.

The men who were held up were taken to the Cook County Jail and held for three days. They were then released after a line-up of suspects failed to identify them.

FRANCE OPPOSES WASHINGTON PACT, SEALS ITS DOOM

Paris Government Virtually Pledges Self To Effect Death of Treaty Denounced by Japan.

By the Associated Press.

France Friday was reported ready to get on record her opposition to the Washington treaty, which Japan intends shortly to denounce.

The Paris government, which previously refused Tokyo's request that it join in denouncing the pact, denied it had changed its position, but high French quarters pointed out that parliament's ratification of the treaty in 1923 virtually pledged the government to see that the treaty expires in 1938.

In any case, France is expected formally to notify the other signatories that she considers the treaty at an end after 1936.

Paris—Francis Pictet, minister of the navy, and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval explained the government's intentions to the senate and foreign affairs committee of the chamber, Pictet declaring France "always ready for the limitation of armaments" though the Washington treaty is "intolerable."

London—British and American delegations to the adjourned tripartite naval conversations, who have stood together for maintenance of the Washington pact's principles, were not agreeably surprised by the French decision.

Tokyo—As Emperor Hirohito completed abrogation of the treaty, Japanese newspapers charged American "astuteness" caused the breakdown of the London negotiations and praised Great Britain's "seasonable" attitude.

Washington—A move to increase fortification in the Pacific was said to be virtually certain as Anthony J. Dismas, Alaska delegate to congress, announced he would press for establishment of an air base in that possession.

The government was represented as still hopeful that naval limitation agreements might be continued, though disappointed over the outcome of the London conversations, and eager that Americans refrain from belittling talk.

New York—Japan "has no idea of war," warlike disposition at all, Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state and peace negotiator, said in an interview, adding "she is just bargaining for a better naval ratio."

FRANCE GOES ON RECORD IN OPPOSITION TO PACT.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—(AP)—France today went on record in opposition to the Washington naval treaty, which expires at the end of 1936.

An official announcement, however, denied that the government has any intention of joining Japan in formally denouncing the pact.

As Francis Pictet, minister of the navy, termed the pact "intolerable for France," high French quarters pointed out that the government, under the parliamentary ratification of the treaty in 1923, stands pledged to denounce it if necessary to insure France's freedom of action at its expiration.

A secret joint session of the chamber of deputies and foreign affairs and naval committees decided denunciation was unnecessary in view of Japan's intended action, it was understood, but should Japan fail to abrogate the pact, the Paris government would be virtually forced to do so to assure its expiration in 1938.

In any event it was understood the government formally would notify the other four signatories that they consider the treaty void after 1936.

The official announcement, issued after the committee meeting, said the report that the French government intends to denounce the Washington treaty shortly is devoid of all foundation.

AMERICANS AND BRITISH ARE TAKEN BY SURPRISE.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A sudden French decision to get France on record, along with Japan, as opposed to continuance of the Washington naval treaty took British and American experts by surprise today.

They had been assured previously that France would let Japan take all the heat.

BRITAIN SHIELDS ARMS QUIZ PLANS

MacDonald Reveals Royal Commission Will Conduct Inquiry.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—(P)—Great Britain will stage its own arms inquiry but just how all-embracing it will be only the national government knows.

A royal commission will be given the task of investigating the arms industry. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald told the house of commons just before it rose for the Christmas holidays.

He gave no indication, however, how large or how small that task would be, leaving warily eager questioners from the floor as to the powers to be vested in the royal commission.

Questioners were referred to the declaratory Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, made before the commons November 22 which the house accepted, in which Sir John declared the government would oppose any "fishing inquiry" dealing with rumors concerning conduct of the arms trade.

A question put by Herbert Williams, conservative member from South Croydon, as to whether the body would have the power to "send for those people who are constantly sowing seeds of suspicion in this country and ask them to justify their contentions" drew the prime minister's quick reply:

Atlanta Bank To Aid Drive For One-Variety Cottonseed

H. Lane Young Tells Bankers' Meeting C.S. Will Finance 180 Tons for Spring Planting.

The cause of uniform one-variety cottonseed was given impetus Friday when H. Lane Young offered on behalf of the Citizens & Southern National Bank to finance 180 tons for next spring planting in Georgia, provided the loan can be placed on an acceptable basis. Representatives of the Georgia Experiment Station have undertaken to complete the transaction.

This plan was suggested following a discussion of the subject at the annual meeting of the Georgia Bankers' Association at the Piedmont hotel.

The program for one-variety cottonseed was presented by C. A. McLeod, of the bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, on promotion and seed distribution. E. C. Westbrook, state leader of one-variety cotton community work, on community organization, and R. P. Bledsoe, agronomist of the Georgia Experiment Station, on seed selection and soil allotment. Secretary Haynes McFadden, of the Georgia Bankers' Association, said that the one-variety cottonseed program had been approved in resolutions adopted by five November group meetings. Mr. Young said that, if put on the basis of a sound loan, the Citizens & Southern National bank would supply the sum needed.

Sams Presents Plans. R. F. Sams Jr., of Clarkston, president of the American Vegetable Growers' Association, presented his plan for the organization of a state association, in which he said the cooperation of banks and all other groups is necessary. It was moved that the co-operation of the Georgia agricultural committee be pledged to Mr. Sams in carrying his plans to successful completion.

The annual conference of the state agricultural committee with Director Dan H. Otis, of the agricultural commission of the American Bankers' Association, also took place at the same meeting.

H. Lane Young, vice president and executive manager of the Citizens & Southern National, spoke on "Coordinating Georgia with the United States at Large in Banker-Farmer Activities." He said the south under present conditions is holding an umbrella over the wide world, so far as cotton is concerned. This emphasizes the need that faces the farmer to live at home, through such expedients as improved farm accounting, which is the major activity of the agricultural commission of the American Bankers' Association for the current year. He asked Director Otis to follow through on the subject of farm accounting.

Director Otis introduced this subject by saying that 2,001 bankers in the United States are definitely devoting their active efforts to improve agriculture. This has been especially helpful in developing a sympathetic understanding between bankers and farmers. From incomplete records it has been ascertained that 32,104 bankers have attended farm meetings in the past six years and have enlisted 37,913 farm people in new enterprises of farm betterment. Georgia's part has been far above the average state in this work. Director Otis said, having made a perfect score in the American Bankers' Association banker-farmer contest for four consecutive years. He then emphasized the value of proper farm accounting, which makes the farmer a better bank customer and ordinarily enables him to secure a more adequate line of bank credit than the old rule-of-thumb methods. He gave practical examples from farms where exact accounting methods have been adopted. Georgia's progress in banker-farmer activities for the current year as reviewed and declared satisfactory in all respects.

Walter Pitkin Speaks. The agricultural committee adjourned to luncheon, where the speaker was Walter B. Pitkin, author of "Life Begins at Forty," and head of the Columbia University School of Journalism. He also is a distinguished figure in the field of corporate farm management, which was his subject at the bankers' meeting. Mr. Pitkin pointed out the opportunities for the development of corporate farm management in Georgia. He founded the Eastern Shore Farm Associates in Maryland, which now operates on its own account and for clients more than 7,000 acres. This concern has been experimenting along various lines for the last two years, with a view of perfecting policies and methods of extended operations.

Engaged in active farming for the last 25 years in New Jersey, Texas and Maryland, Mr. Pitkin has made extensive studies of coming trends in land values, land investment methods and farm management.

Resides those above mentioned the gathering included a number of Atlanta bankers, Willis Johnson, of West Point; J. M. Norman, of Waycross; H. Huckabee, of Fort Valley; E. B. James Jr., of Louisville; J. T. Haley, of Albany; W. S. Elliott, of Canton; J. E. Brooks, of Camilla; D. R. Cumming, of Griffin; George W. Gilmore, of Sandersville; John M. Graham, of Rome; J. H. Houch and J. N. Rogers, of Gainesville; Lee S. Trimble, of Augusta; Jack B. Key, of Columbus; Walter S. Cochran, of Rome, and others.

MISS KATE WILLIAMS FATALITY STRICKEN HERE

Found lying unconscious in her bed early Friday morning, Miss Kate Williams, 49, a dressmaker, of 443 Hopkins street, died shortly after reaching Grady hospital.

According to her sister, Mrs. Claude R. McCarty, of 307 Willard street, S. W., Miss Williams had been suffering from a stomach disorder for some time and during the night took some medicine but her sister was unable to state whether the medicine had any apparent effect on Miss Williams.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the First Baptist church, Columbus, where Miss Williams will be buried.

COL. WILKES GRATIFIED AT COUSIN'S PROMOTION

Colonel Sam W. Wilkes, publicity director of the A. & W. P. and Georgia railroads, is highly gratified over the promotion of his younger cousin, Sam D. Wilkes, to the position of division traffic manager of the Eastern Air Lines.

Colonel Wilkes told The Constitution Friday night that beginning this morning he would, however, refuse to accept congratulations on the younger Wilkes' promotion, and that friends wishing to congratulate a Wilkes on a fine advancement could do so by calling or dialing Walnut 6618 and asking for Sam D. Wilkes.

ATLANTA CHIEF URGES STATE POLICE PATROL

Voices Approval of Proposed System in Letter to Governor Talmadge.

Chief of Police T. O. Sturdivant, of Atlanta, Friday added his approval to the projected establishment of a state highway police system, equipped with radio, and added that he believed a state-wide teletype hookup should be included in the plan.

In a letter to Governor Eugene Talmadge, who already has given the state police system his unqualified endorsement, Chief Sturdivant said he considered the plan "a magnificent step forward" and praised the governor for assuming leadership in the campaign for its adoption.

Chief Sturdivant's letter follows: "I want to take this occasion to express to you my personal appreciation for the outspoken stand you have taken on behalf of a move that is now on foot for an inter-city radio hookup and a more thoroughly patrolled state highway. These things are of great importance to the security of the people of our state."

"There is still one other matter that I think ought to be included in any general scheme for a more thoroughly patrolled state, and that is state-wide inter-city communicating teletypewriters and I sincerely trust this idea will be given very serious thought by those into whose care is left the framing of legislation for a better patrolled state."

"Right at this time we are here in Atlanta endeavoring most earnestly to put into operation the Bell System of teletypewriting, connecting our department in Atlanta with the suburban cities of Hapeville, College Park, Decatur, East Point, Bolton and Buckhead. The central station would be in Atlanta, and in event of a robbery or murder, or any other high crime being perpetrated here we could almost instantly block every important highway or traffic artery leading out of the city."

"At our Atlanta office we could typewrite a complete description of the fleeing fugitive and the message would instantly be flashed at the same time to every police headquarters of the cities mentioned. These cities, in turn, could communicate with our station. The messages would also be private."

"What a magnificent step forward it would be if every important city in Georgia could be similarly connected. What a great service to our people in making lives and their homes more secure!"

"Again thanking you for the interest you are taking along these important lines, I have the honor of being, Sincerely and cordially, T. O. STURDIVANT, Chief of Police."

Cusack Pursues Wife To Recover Children

CUERO, Texas, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Family silverware and the custody of three children were at issue in a race by Charles Edmund Cusack, of Chicago, and his estranged wife from California to Texas tonight. Both used planes and motor cars.

Armed with a warrant charging his wife with theft of silverware and their three boys, aged 5 to 9 years, at the Cuero home of her parents. Mrs. Ann Hamilton Cusack, reported en route with the boys to Cuero to spend the Christmas holidays, also is charged with defying a court order restraining her from removing the children from Los Angeles county.

The father claims custody of the trio, but the boys' mother, Mrs. Cusack, left Albuquerque at noon with William Killian, Los Angeles deputy sheriff, for Marfa, Texas, upon receiving a report officers had arrested his wife there. "My officers, however," said "she and her boys were smuggled out of town."

Ickes Opens Bids for Techwood Project

Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, left, and Colonel Horatio B. Hackett, director of the housing division, PWA, are shown in the above picture as they opened bids Thursday at PWA headquarters, Washington, for the Techwood slum clearance project, Atlanta. The J. A. Jones Company, Charlotte, N. C., was the low bidder for the construction work at $2,095,000. In the background is shown a drawing of Techwood. The development will replace 43 blocks of slum area here. Award of the contract is expected within the next few days and actual work will be begun soon after the first of the year, under plans of the government. Associated Press photo.

Use of Magnesium Oxide Expected To Make Clearer Telescopic Lenses

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21.—(AP)—One of the few men in the world who "grow" new types of crystals to make better telescopic lenses had a bit of good news today.

John D. Strong, research fellow at the California Institute of Technology, told the American Physical Society here that magnesium oxide was one of the crystals telescope makers and astronomers have been looking for.

He reported that it was good for use with quartz and fluorite to form an achromatic triplet for ultraviolet. This does for the telescope what the ordinary crystal used in making telescopic lenses can do ground into proper geometrical forms to make good lenses, but it has faults in conveying true colors and sometimes in defining objects.

Other forms of crystals, less suitable for geometrical shaping, must be fitted into the lens to correct aberrations. Strong "grows" artificial crystals by the melt or fusion method, being accredited a discovery in this respect. Nature produces crystals by three methods, those by fusion, made when the grains were more like a hot star with tremendous heat, by the vapor and by the solution methods. The time of the process varies, the diamond for instance, taking millions of years; the magnesium oxide a few minutes.

Magnesium oxide absorbs water, and must be used between two other forms of crystal. Strong has other important works to his credit. He is doing the research for changing the mirrors of great telescopes from the silver standard to the aluminum. Already he has coated some observatory mirrors with aluminum, whose properties are said to surpass the former silver coat.

Divorcee Found Slain In Mississippi Ditch

COLUMBUS, Miss., Dec. 21.—(UP)—The body of Mrs. Otis Bamer Kelly, 27, attractive divorcee, was found face down in a ditch four miles west of here today. There were pistol wounds in her head and side. She had been missing since Monday night but police were not informed of it.

A coroner's jury failed to reach a verdict and will meet again tomorrow. Sheriff Harry West believed the body was thrown from an automobile. A search was started for a man in a small black sedan, who was reported to have forced Mrs. Kelly into his car and driven her away Monday night.

A negro living near the scene reportedly hearing three shots last night. The woman's relatives could give no motive for the killing.

Federal Agents Find Mais' Deserted Home

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—(AP)—From a raid on an alleged hideout of Robert Mais, federal agents tonight obtained additional information on the activities of the fugitive killer and his gang, but their quarry had once again fled the pursuing law.

The raid was made on a house in Riverside, N. J., after a huckster was reported to have "tipped" authorities he had seen several men and a woman, resembling members of the Mais band, in the place.

With automatic pistols and sub-machine guns a squad of agents dashed to Riverside, but on reaching there they learned the place had been vacated recently by the men they sought, and that a new tenant occupied it.

The Riverside house, agents said, is just across the Delaware river from the house in nearby Torresdale Manor, where, authorities disclosed they have learned, William Weiss, kidnapped night-life figure, was held before he was slain.

COUNTERFEITING PLANT IS SEIZED IN JERSEY

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Alan G. Strickland, principal of a secret service operative in this district, disclosed today that two men were arrested early today by secret service agents who descended on the little community of Centerville, N. J., and captured what they described as one of the largest and most efficient counterfeit plants in the east.

Strickland said the prisoners described themselves as Peter Domonkos, an unemployed engraver, and his brother, Paul, a printer. The agents charged both were armed and resisted arrest.

KIDNAPER-ROBBER SEIZES $1,300 PAY ROLL

WOBURN, Mass., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A lone gunman today forced the president of the Massachusetts Gear and Tool Co. to drive away from the Woburn National bank here in a pay roll of $1,300 and later dropped him out of his automobile five miles away at Burlington and escaped with the pay roll, police said.

Washington Pays $1.98 For Fake Champagne

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Washingtonians who have been paying $1.98 for a fifth-gallon of a special brand of champagne were chagrined today to find they had been buying hard cider.

The pure food and drug administration seized 200 bottles of a liquid labeled "champagne" at 13 local stores on the ground that it was hard cider charged with carbon dioxide gas to imitate champagne and was improperly labeled.

Man Shot by Bandit Reported Near Death

Unconsciousness Friday sealed the lips of David A. Lord, holdup victim, just as he was attempting to tell his brother the name of the man who early Thursday morning shot him during the holdup of a filling station in the heart of the Center Hill community.

W. F. Lord, brother of the victim who Friday night was reported unconscious and near death at Grady hospital, told police that Friday morning he asked his brother if he knew who shot him.

"Yes, I know who shot me and I'd get him if I could get out of here," Lord quoted his brother as saying.

When Lord asked his brother to name the man who shot him, he lapsed into unconsciousness, Lord said.

Attendants at Grady hospital Friday night held out little hopes for Lord's recovery.

WOMAN ASKS $50,000 FORBIDDEN AGREEMENT

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Allen McGwier, 40, a divorcee, has been named defendant in a $50,000 damage suit brought by Mrs. Pearl Scott Walker, divorcee, of Orange, N. J., it was disclosed in the supreme court today. Her contention is that McGwier broke an agreement to pay her $250 a month for life made on condition that her former husband, Ross H. Walker, of Richmond, Va., dropped an alienation suit against him.

The litigation was disclosed when Justice John L. Walsh denied an application by McGwier to dismiss the complaint on grounds it did not state a cause of action and was otherwise legally defective.

REAL ESTATE OWNERS PLAN 'DEFENSIVE' BODY

Statewide Meeting Called by Robert C. Mizell for Macon on January 8.

Georgia real estate owners Friday made plans for a "defensive" organization to be formed January 8 at Macon when large taxpayers from the state's 150 counties will meet at the call of the Georgia Real Estate Taxpayers' Association.

The meeting, according to announcement, will be held at 1 o'clock, eastern time, on the afternoon of Tuesday, January 8, at the Dempsey hotel.

Robert C. Mizell, formerly president of the Atlanta Taxpayers' Association and president of the Georgia organization, called the session at the suggestion of R. C. Neely Jr., of Waynesboro, Burke county.

Listing as the main objective the passage of remedial legislation in the next general legislature, the invitation points out that real estate owners pay the bulk of all taxation.

"The purpose is to secure relief from excessive real estate taxation," the announcement reads.

"Every commercial and other interest in our state has some type of organized effort to protect itself against unfair taxation except real estate owners who are paying the bulk of all taxation. We want to remedy this condition."

"The present effort is to secure attendance at this meeting of at least one or more representative real estate taxpayers citizens from each county in Georgia."

Colonial Yule Rites Revived at W. & M.
WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Customs traced back carefully to colonial days were revived here last night for an old-time yule celebration at the College of William and Mary.

A yule log was dragged in; last year's log was burned, the new one kindled from it, extinguished with wine and put away for burning next year. A boar's head and plum pudding made with rum were among viands served along with such modern dishes as turkey and Smithfield ham.

President John Stewart Bryan, presiding as lord of the manor, and other college officials in colonial costume helped to add the historical air to the celebration in the college refectory in the restored Christopher Wren building.

ATLANTA, GA., DEC. 22, 1934.

LET'S GO, ATLANTA!

Today The Constitution announces that the annual Ten Opportunities campaign, a drive which is made every Christmas to secure sufficient income for the ten neediest families in the city, has gone over the top.

Never before has Atlanta responded so promptly and so splendidly—never before has it been possible to announce that all ten of the families have been provided for another year, earlier than Christmas morning.

This year, four days before Christmas, the cry has been heard and ten little family groups are saved for another 12 months.

This morning, however, the story of an eleventh "Opportunity" family is published, with the heartfelt hope that somewhere in the great city is the heart which will respond to a family in desperate straits and adopt it for 1935.

So many poor families in Atlanta need a helping hand to lift them back to independence and self-respecting security! The need is so far-flung that it is a heart-rending task to select the neediest families from all those whose cases have been studied.

When the time came, this year, to select the ten families to be given the Ten Opportunity places, it seemed impossible to choose. The need is so great in so many families that, after the final selection was made, it caused a tightening in the throat, a mistiness in the eyes when the cases of half a dozen who had, perforce, been left out, were remembered.

Now, however, through the big heartedness of Atlanta and the quickness of the response, there is a hope that these other families may be cared for, too. Between now and Christmas Day, perhaps, there will be time to appeal for and find sponsors for these other needy ones.

The story of Opportunity Eleven is published today. It is the hope and prayer of all connected with the movement that someone will telephone, or call in person, on the Opportunity Editor early this morning and announce that No. Eleven is safely in the haven.

Won't it be grand if, on Christmas morning, we can announce that 12, or 15, or even 20 "Opportunities" have been accepted this year?

A MUNICIPAL STEP-CHILD
The people of Atlanta have become accustomed to annual reports revealing outstanding service performed by the Carnegie library, despite cramped quarters and limited and overworked staffs.

This year's report varies from those that have gone before only in a still better showing for the library as compared to the service being rendered by similar institutions in other cities quartered in more commodious structures and with much larger revenues.

Figures prepared by the American Library Association reveal that in the group of 14 American cities having between 200,000 and 300,000 population, the expenses of the Atlanta library are $46,000 below the average, and the expense per registered borrower less than in any of the other 13 cities.

The salaries paid in the Atlanta library totaled $70,000, while the average was $112,000. The Atlanta library is 60,000 volumes short of the average number of books. Only three other cities in the 43 municipalities having 200,000 population have fewer books in their libraries than is the case in Atlanta.

The average librarian in the country handles 3,491 less books per year than do the members of the staff of the Atlanta library.

These figures tell a convincing story of efficient management, but they also paint a picture of an overworked and too small group of librarians.

The report frankly admits that "the library, because of limited funds for books, for staff and for maintenance is not reaching the city as it should."

Certainly for that failure the staff of the library can be held to blame in no degree. On the contrary, remarkable results have been accomplished, all things considered.

The blame lies in the failure of the city government to supply the library with the revenue it should have. The Carnegie library has been for all too long a municipal step-child.

THE TAXATION SURVEY

Solution of a major evil in the American system of national and local government is sought in the taxation survey President Roosevelt has ordered to be made by experts of the treasury department. Special study will be given to the problem of overlapping and double taxation.

Many sources of taxation are now tapped heavily by federal, state and local governments, while other sources escape practically scot free. The question of how the problem of equalizing the tax burden can be solved has received the attention of taxing bodies for years, but no concrete reforms have been accomplished.

It is apparent that only through earnest and sincere co-operation between the federal, state and local governments can taxation duplication be eliminated. To this end it has been suggested that "zones of taxation" be created for the various governing units. Among other suggestions is the proposal that all tax collecting be done by the federal agencies, and each state's share be turned over to it. There are many other suggestions, most of them calling for radical departure from present taxing methods.

The indorsement of the survey ordered by the president by the conference of mayors now in session gives assurance that governments of every nature in the country are aware of the necessity for taxation reform and that universal co-operation may be expected.

The American governmental structure is so loosely woven, and contains so many unnecessary and useless units, that our taxation system is probably the most inefficient in any of the major nations of the world. From the federal congress down through thousands of state, county and municipal governments and until small district committees are reached there exists the power to pour on taxes to the already overburdened owners of property of all kinds.

Each one of these taxing authorities naturally turn to the most obvious sources of taxation, and the ones from which taxes can be collected the most easily. The result is that real estate and commodities such as gasoline are bearing the lion's share of taxation while other property is carrying but little of the load, and hidden assets practically none.

It is in the hope of finding a way to make the American system of taxation more efficient and equitable that President Roosevelt has ordered the survey by the treasury department. There exists no problem of more vital importance to every person in the country and every government, whatever its nature, should co-operate with the federal experts in their efforts to evolve a plan of taxation more equitable and just than the hodge-podge system now in use.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON.

PRANK WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The merriest political prank of the Christmas season was the one invented by Messrs. Roosevelt and La Guardia on the New York public utility boys.

At least it certainly was bright, and probably was intended as a prank, when the two clever political pranksters announced they were going to build a public light plant at New York City.

Unless the New Deal gnomes here miss their guess, no bricks will be laid for that plant. The PWA may allocate some money for it, but long before any of it is spent for construction, the private utility company is supposed to give in and announce a sharp reduction in rates.

In other words, Messrs. Roosevelt and La Guardia are going to fill the public's stocking with kilowatts and gas, just to provide the Christmas spirit.

SUSPICIOUS The initial move was acted out realistically by the principals here, except in one particular. They got vague when anyone mentioned how much money it would cost. PWA-er licks inadvertently let slip the figure $45,000,000. La Guardia indefinitely said that was only the bitters for the cocktail.

The truth is that the Davidson program formulated last year calls for $109,000,000, which is more than Mr. Ickes has lying around loose.

Another suspicious aspect is the way the meeting between President Roosevelt and Mayor La Guardia was arranged. La Guardia was supposed to officiate at the marriage of a friend in New York on the day he came to the White House. The marriage engagement had been made a month before. It was not called off until just after Mr. La Guardia received a hasty summons from the White House and caught the midnight train. There is evidence also that Mr. La Guardia had only a vague understanding of why he was being called to the White House before he arrived there.

Apparently the initiative in the move was Mr. Roosevelt's, although the publicity was handled in such a way as to create the impression that La Guardia came down here demanding money. These two make a hard pair when it comes to playing games.

MUNITIONS There is another Yuletide game going on which has most of the insiders muddled. No one seems to be able to figure out who is putting it over on whom in the deep conflict between the senate munitions investigating committee and the administration.

There seems to be little ground for the current story that the committee took that income tax sheet of Mr. Roosevelt's friend, Bernard Baruch, merely because Roosevelt and Baruch took the play away from the committee on curtailing war profits. The committee had the data concerning the Baruch income tax (and those of other democrats) two months ago. It merely selected an opportune time to make the data public.

Yet certain New Dealers are boiling. They may or may not make public their accusation that the committee did not act entirely in good faith.

ACCUSATION The Nye committee has or should have (whisper the New Dealers) the reports of revenue agents on Baruch's income for the missing years 1918 and 1919. These were never destroyed. They show Baruch's income for the two years was less than $25,000. They show also that all old returns on incomes of less than $25,000 were destroyed before Mr. Roosevelt became president.

No one will say anything about it, but Baruch's income for the two years is really supposed to show a net loss. That sounds like a fair assumption in view of the fact that he transferred his investments to Liberty bonds for those two years and was bound to have sold many of his investments at a loss when he entered government service.

One thing of which you may be sure is that the scrap is proof of sharp feeling between the Nye committee and the White House and you have not yet heard the last of it.

OMISSION An overlooked fact about the famous Viner report on commercial credit was that it did not touch on the two big subjects which Professor Viner and his freshman brain trust were commissioned to study last summer. The omitted subjects were the two touchy ones—taxation and banking reform. You cannot find it out officially, but there will be no report on those two things until you are getting your old age pension.

NOTES There was no political reason for starting a municipal power plant in New York. The voters' registration figures were published on the same day as the Roosevelt-La Guardia move. They showed 1,490,000 registered democrats and 320,000 republicans.

There is a subbrain trust in the New Deal now. It is composed of about 25 thinkers who "wrote every line in a while to talk things over among themselves. So far they have successfully avoided any publicity.

A man who might be called a former capitalist observed caustically the other day that his slogan for labor now was "Let Us Keep the Wolf Away From the Garage Door."

That one reminded an eminent British wit of the story about the wife of the millionaire who was looking at a house for sale and asked the agents: "Where are the chauffeur's servants' quarters?" (Copyright, 1934, by Paul Mallon.)

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My dear Louise:
A shrewd old woman in "The Hoosier School Master," advising her husband in the matter of acquiring land, tells him to "git a plenty while you're gettin' it."

When I try to make plans for your future security and happiness, and realize how little I can do that will really count, I can think of nothing better than to repeat the old woman's advice.

Lay up treasures while you can. But choose the kind of treasures that thieves cannot steal or banks lose or panics make worthless.

While you are young, happiness seems to depend on such things as nice clothes, automobile rides, shows, travel. But that is an illusion. Would any of these things make you add to your pleasure. Without friends, neither wealth nor entertainments nor any other thing money can buy will make life enjoyable.

There may be selfish and miserly souls that are satisfied without friends so long as they have wealth, but never yet has there been a happy one.

One of our presidents was a serious, prosaic man who had no gift for friendship. He wasn't cold or haughty or ill-natured, but simply incapable of being friendly. He never spoke to the servants or waved to a crowd.

That handicap, more than anything else, brought about his downfall. The president who succeeded him was blessed with a different temperament. A genius for friendship won him the nomination and later enabled him to weather many a storm.

It may not be true that one man was unhappy and the other happy, but this much is certain. The first was never once heard to laugh during his four years in the White House, and the other laughed much and heartily.

The loneliest man I know is a friendly soul who likes people but made the fatal mistake of keeping all his eggs in one basket. In his youth he was content with a few friends; and when death took all of these, he was left in an empty world where everybody is friendly and nobody is a friend. It isn't easy to win love after you are forty.

You have the knack of being friendly. Use it as you would a magic wand to gather treasure. Make friends while you can, and make plenty while you're a-makin' it. Love, DAD.

Shank on Hunger Strike To Balk Execution

TUCKER PRISON FARM, Ark., Dec. 21.—(UP)—State Prison Superintendent S. L. Tishner believed today Mark H. Shank, Akron, Ohio, attorney, condemned in the poison slaying of four, has entered a hunger strike to evade execution December 28.

Superintendent Tishner revealed today Shank had refused to partake of food for the third consecutive day. He did not say whether efforts would be made to force him to eat.

Meanwhile, Blake Cook, Keokuk, Ohio, attorney for Shank, joined Little Rock attorneys in a new move to halt the execution. The attorneys indicated they soon may have something new to announce.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 21.—(UP)—Nineteen-year-old Dorothy Marsh, accused of kidnapping a four-day-old baby boy, was bound over to the grand jury today under a $5,000 bond after a preliminary hearing in municipal court.

Mrs. Marsh said she had not had time to consult an attorney, but Detective Jack Small and Albert Kelly said she made a statement admitting the kidnapping Thursday of William Joseph Robbins, infant son of Mrs. Joseph Robbins.

Physicians who examined Mrs. Marsh said she might have been motivated by a strange mental reaction following the premature birth of a child of her own.

For example, if the man who killed the Lindbergh baby should at last be executed, the law would say that justice has been done and the editorials would sound off to the effect that a challenge to society had been met. This might be true, of course, but it is hardly incidental to the human mind that the man who killed the Lindbergh baby should at last be executed.

The most enjoyable revenge in the experience of this generation was the terrified flight of the German kaiser and his son and the humbling of the Prussian officer caste. It is hard to see just now what reform or progress was marked by this event. Hitler and his Nazis have taken the place of the kaiser and the military group on the throne and the world is no better for this. But, recalling the enormous arrogance of the kaiser, his bombast and his attempt to muscle in on the world stage, it is not surprising that the old man was beautiful satisfaction. You could actually drink it.

Great Shame As Stanley Huggins, whom he disliked, when Jeffrey lost to John Johnson, the big "black" event. This was a terrible disappointment to a man who had called himself the World Lord and the world's enjoyment of it, even in Germany, was proportionate to his shame.

The fate of the Russian dynasty will have to rank second. They were cruel enough and the revenge was perfect but the czar was a mushy and futile individual, personally and his family were blanks. Still, the ruling class had been responsible for many tortures and when they got things they got it all. There were no loose ends. If you would recapture the delight which the annihilation of the Russian ruling class conveyed you may do so by reading the "Education of a Prince."

Here too, in Russia, a new grudge has grown up to take the place of the old one. The Soviet government kills and persecutes just as savagely as its predecessors and will one day provide the victims in another overthrow and another whopping big revenge.

U. S. Boasts The satisfaction in the do-it-yourself movement has been more enjoyable than is generally realized. They occur at intervals, there is a lot of whistling and cheering, and they are forgotten. But, in the aggregate, they represent a very handsome roomful of trophies for the U. S. on the world stage.

It is raining an old pleasure to recall the magnificent beating suffered by the Anti-Saloon League. There were dark times during prohibition when people were being shot and imprisoned for owning liquor, when the most optimistic and resolute of the rebels despaired of ever seeing so little as a claret and a decimal beer on public sale again in the United States. Then, suddenly, prohibition cracked and, today, it is a strange joy to walk into an old-fashioned saloon of the kind which was never to come back, and buy a highball openly over a legal bar.

Ku Klux The Ku Klux Klan stormed over the Ku Klux Klan in a time and went down in a ridiculous heap. Men who concealed their membership 10 years ago because they were bound by oath to do so, deny it today but for a different reason. They would be ashamed to confess that they had ever belonged to this ludicrous band which was never to come back, and buy a highball openly over a legal bar.

Arrogance has groveled in the dust on all sides. Jimmie Walker rusticates in England and Al Capone sails on Alcatraz. Samuel Insull, the despot of the middle west, was made to blubber for his freedom before a jury of common men, and the man who didn't even get jobs, J. P. Morgan not only held still for the photographers at whom he used to brandish his cane but posed with a circus midget-crawling in his lap.

Tammany is out, Dutch Schultz is in and the trial of Bruno Hauptmann comes up next month. That all this represents reform or progress I am compelled to doubt. But it is revenge and the taste is sweet.

Validity of Sales Tax Upheld in Kentucky

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 21.—(UP) The validity of the 3 per cent sales tax law and the small loan regulator act passed by the 1934 Kentucky general assembly was upheld today by the court of appeals as it adjourned its fall term by handing down 35 opinions.

The court took no action on the petition of Ben Johnson, chairman of the state highway commission, for a rehearing of the court's November 13 decision affirming the right of Governor Laffoon to dismiss Johnson under the "ouster" law of 1934. As the court will not rehear until January 7, Governor Laffoon cannot proceed against Johnson until that date, or until the court disposes of the petition for a rehearing.

II Duce Will Reward 'Champion' Mothers

ROME, Dec. 21.—(UP)—Premier Benito Mussolini, in his "better babies" campaign, tomorrow noon will receive 94 mothers at Venice palace.

Among them will be the most profitable mother in the city of Rome, yet to be named. In all, these 94 women have had a total of 912 children, or an average of 9.7 each.

II Duce, praising them for their patriotic plans to distribute envelopes to these mothers, containing cash.

TWO WHITLEY BIDS REJECTED BY BOARD

ing in Pennsylvania station. They do not expect to stay in Hollywood generally chooses to throw up them.

The "best-dressed man" in the world, Johnnie Walker, who is very comfortably and inconspicuously attired in traveling clothes which have none of the usual quality which his highness, the Prince of Wales, has popularized, and certainly none of the bizarre notes which morbid claims for the French-American character actor.

Verre Tassad's conservative charm had none of that complete abandon to which has turned the New York woman of 1884 into a distressing part of the winter landscape, instead of preserving her individuality as a human being in the way fashions of other years have done.

Mme. Menjou was prone to do. Her suit, her silver fork, her primly curled coiffure alike brushed to the left across the back of her head, her little crown which Madame Fashion says you must wear to be one of her pet followers, were all very charming. But none of it would come of natives of Great Bend, to say nothing of the natives of Park avenue, all of whom have gone a bit further than Mr. and Mrs. Menjou, looking very much as if they would like to forget about pictures for the nonce, had to listen to a lecture on the virtues of fruit juice and black coffee to the tide of a bustling young man with a derby hat, highly colored scarf, a deal of pressed clothing, and a selling show whether good or bad, and just how to go about it.

It occurred to me as the famous picture stepped into their taxi that perhaps they are in a mood. Perhaps the famous Mr. Menjou had deliberately chosen the most inconspicuous clothing he possessed in order to escape the tag by which he lives all year. And that Mrs. Menjou wanted to remain just a "missus" during her merry Christmas, thereby escaping the necessity for making a scene on the day which her fame in Hollywood as a starlet has brought upon her.

Schultz Is Released Under $75,000 Bond

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 21.—(UP)—Dutch Schultz, New York bootlegger of prohibition days, posted $75,000 bail bond and was released from the county jail where he was held on a federal charge of tax evasion.

Schultz, whose real name is Arthur Flegenheimer, was indicted for tax evasion two years ago. He was fugitive until November 28. He surrendered to United States Commissioner Leonard Hubbard.

EXPERTS DRAFTING NEW BANKING BILL

Projected Measure To Seek Wider Reserve Powers To Loosen Credit

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Treasury experts worked today on a projected new banking bill, to be submitted for White House consideration, one part of which would seek new powers for the federal reserve board in an effort to "unleash billions" in dormant-up bank credit.

The plan was described by one authority, who would not be named by name, as founded on relaxed eligibility rules for the redemption of commercial paper by the reserve banks.

This portion of the measure appeared likely to prove the most controversial of all on Capitol Hill. The placing of new authority in the reserve board would tend further to ward a central banking system, managed from Washington.

Specifically, the drafters propose that the federal reserve board be given wide discretionary power to give what type of paper shall be eligible for redemption. They would repeal the present limitation that eligible paper shall not exceed 90 days maturity, or 100 agricultural or live stock paper, nine months.

Those studying the proposal contend that long-term industrial and mortgage loans make up most of the present demand for credit. Through new eligibility rules, they say, banks could meet this demand without endangering their liquidity.

It has been estimated that a portion of from thirteen to fifteen billion dollars in time deposits could be employed in these channels. Another contention is that from fifteen to twenty billion in credit could be created by turning into the long-term field the excess reserves now idle because of the virtual disappearance of 90-day paper.

Putting banks into a position to make the long-term demands has been considered as an alternative to heavier direct government lending. Direct federal reserve board control, the drafters assert, would operate to prevent any inflation threats which might arise from the change.

First Day of Winter To Be Warm, Cloudy

Today, marking the first official day of winter as well as the next to the last shopping day before Christmas, will be warmer, with increased cloudiness, George W. Mindling, Atlanta weather forecaster, said Friday.

At 6:30 o'clock this morning Old Sol reaches the southernmost part of his annual trip below the equator, which officially inaugurates winter for the northern hemisphere. Today's temperature extremes will be near 38 and 60, an increase over Friday's low of 26 reported at Candler field.

A light blanket of snow covered most of the northern portion of the country Friday from the Dakotas eastward to New York, while storm signals were flown in western Montana.

KRAFT YULE LETTER RECEIVED IN ATLANTA

Christmas greetings which will travel from J. L. Kraft to more than 15,000 employees and acquaintances around the world reached here Friday. In accordance with an annual custom which Mr. Kraft has maintained since the formation of the cheese company of which he is president, his Christmas letter travels to every employee of the company at the Christmas season. The letters reach Melbourne, Australia; Hayes, England; Denison, Texas; and Carlsbad, Arkansas, simultaneously.

When the custom was inaugurated, the company employees numbered in the dozens. Each of these received a personal letter—and now that the numbers reach into thousands, the personal greeting still comes as one of the most unusual expressions of Christmas greetings extended in the business world.

Mr. Kraft's Christmas letter for 1934, is addressed, as always, simply "To My Friends."

RAY C. LANG TO HEAD Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS

Ray C. Lang has been elected president of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. at it was announced Friday by the board. He will succeed Charles M. Marshall, who has served as president for the last four years. Several new members of the board of directors were elected. They are Thomas W. Moore, Fred L. Rand and Frank B. Sikes. These new members with the following old members will compose the board: Milton V. Beck, F. J. Coudler Jr., Floyd Field, Frances E. Kamper, R. C. Lang, C. M. Marshall, P. W. Miller, E. W. Moise, M. Shelton, J. M. T. Lawrence, Willet and George Winslow.

Officers of the board for 1935 will be R. C. Lang, president; Lawrence Willet, vice president; Floyd Field, secretary, and George Winslow, treasurer.

BIBLE CLASS TO HONOR E. R. BLACK'S MEMORY

The Twentieth Century Bible class of the First Baptist church will hold a memorial service in honor of the late Eugene R. Black at 10 o'clock Sunday morning in the classroom. Mr. Black was for many years teacher of the class.

Dr. Ellis A. Fuller, pastor of the church, will address the meeting on the subject, "The Life and Ministry of Mr. Black as a Christian Layman," and Judge David M. Parker will talk on "Mr. Black as Atlanta's Greatest Leader and Bible Teacher."

A large silver loving cup will be presented to Mr. Black's family as an expression of the loving memory of the members of the class.

Programs of Christmas Music Arranged by Atlanta Churches

In keeping with a Christmas season that finds many homes and families rehabilitated and a higher general morale existing within its borders, Atlanta and her churches have made plans for special observance services, including many brilliant pageants and musical programs.

The church choir and a large chorus will give the cantata, "Angels Tidings," at the First Baptist church in College Park at 7:30 Sunday night. The musical cantata, under the direction of Walter Sheats, runs about 30 minutes. On Monday night the Sunday school will give a Christmas tree at the church at 7:30 o'clock.

At the Wesley Memorial Methodist church the chorus choir will give two special musical programs. At 11 o'clock Sunday morning the choir will sing "Te Deum in E Flat." Miss Ruby Waldrop will sing the soprano solo; Mrs. Lillian D. Elstner, contralto; James Gresham, tenor, and Henry Mullins, baritone. Miss Martha Sandler, the church organist, will play as soloist, "Jesus of Nazareth," by Gounod, and "Christmas Eve," by Bach. At the evening service at 7:30 o'clock carols will be sung by the ladies' quartet, male trio and mixed quartet arrangements. After the carol arrangements the choir will sing the Christmas cantata, "The Hope of the World," by Schnecker. Mr. Mullins will sing Nedlinger's "A Birthday of a King." Organ selections will include favorite old familiar carols.

A special manager service will be held at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at St. Luke's Episcopal church. At this service the pupils of the Sunday school will offer their gifts for the needy. "What! No Santa Suit?" a play, will be given at the meeting of the St. Luke's Young People's Service League at 6:30 Sunday night. A group of needy children will be guests of the league for this play. After the play there will be an old-fashioned Christmas tree party with all the visiting children receiving special gifts.

A case of more than 100 persons, supported by a full choir of mixed voices, will dramatize the pageant, "The Light of the World," in Glenn Memorial Methodist church at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The pageant will be directed by Mrs. Nat G. Long, Dr. M. H. Dewey will play the organ, Mrs. N. A. Goodyear, the piano, and R. E. Mell will direct the choir. The cast will include: Gatewood Workman, Charles Adair, William Alden, Millard Rawls, Ray Nixon, Ben Thebaut, Frances Houston, Frances Masse, Louise Quayle, Myron Ragland, Roberta Cason, Cornelia Taylor, Mrs. Ralph Wager, Mrs. R. E. Mell, Frances McDonald, Bond, Fleming, Ruth Cox, William Matthews, Rachel Johnson, Mrs. Boone Bowen, Wilbur Kurts and others.

"The Christian Year," a pageant written by the Rev. H. F. Saumenig, rector of St. Peter's church, of Rome, Ga., will be presented by members of the church school at the Church of the Epiphany Sunday night. The pageant portrays, through the characters represented, the different seasons of the year as observed by the Christian church for many years. Appropriate costumes will be worn and fitting backgrounds for each season will be erected. At 10:30 o'clock Christmas morning there will be a celebration of the holy communion at the church. The choir will give their special Christmas music. On Thursday night the annual church school Christmas party will be held at the church. The social hall will be decorated with Christmas colors and symbols.

A Christmas pageant, "Behold He Cometh," will be given at the Moore Memorial Presbyterian church at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The church will offer special music after which there will be a Christmas tree party for the children of the Sunday school.

Dr. W. H. Major, pastor, will preach at the Capitol Avenue Baptist church at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. This is Dr. Major's first sermon since recovering from a recent operation. At 7:30 o'clock Sunday night the Bible school, under the direction of Miss Marion Smith, will present the Christmas pageant, "The Three Wise Men."

Mayor to Voice Message.

The spirit of Christmas will be exemplified by Mayor James L. Key in a Christmas message to his Bible class in the Paramount theater at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning. The Sunny Side quartet, composed of Bob Hughes and his three children, Robert, Stella and Louis, will present a harmony version of the life of the Savior, from the manger to the cross. A special Christmas carol will be sung by the choir. The Bible class will present a Christmas story over radio station WGST at 4:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon. This program, "The Birth of Christ," was arranged by Miss Coola Mitchell, with Choir Director George Butler, and Mrs. Ruby Johnson, accompanist. C. A. Thomas, class president, will be narrator.

The young people's choir of the Gordon Street Presbyterian church will present the Christmas cantata, "The Chimes of the Holy Night," by Fred B. Holton, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the church. The choir is under the leadership of Miss Josephine Johnston and is composed of Martha Albright, Ruth Schilling, Virginia Morris, Sylvia Schilling, Dorothea Caldwell, Ruth Ballinger, Mrs. Dun can Peck, John Parker, Harrison Hopkins, Charlie McLean, Leo Schilling, Jr., Leroy Stevens Jr., O. F. Printup, Carl R. Cunningham and M. G. Johnston.

The choir of the Kirkwood Methodist church, under the direction of Gertrude Roberts Skipper, will present the cantata, "The Light Eternal," by H. W. Petrie, at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night. The soloists will be Miss Martha King, soprano; Miss Dodge Grainger, contralto; Clifford Skipper, tenor; Jimmie Thomason, baritone, and Ralph Berry, baritone.

Christmas Music.

A special program of Christmas music will feature both worship services of the Inman Park Baptist church Sunday. Under the direction of John D. Hoffman, two anthems will be given at the morning service, "Naxos," by Gounod, and "The Birthday of a King," by Nedlinger. Harvey A. Timms will be the soloist. At the evening service the choir will sing "Glory to God in the Highest," by Perzole, and "We Saw Him Sleeping," by Kennedy. The morning sermon subject will be "A Cup of Cold Water in Jesus' Name."

"Holy Night," a beautiful and dramatic Christmas pageant, will be offered at the Grace Methodist church by the Young People's division of the church school in the main auditorium of the church at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The pageant will be directed by Mrs. E. F. Newell. Blended with the carols will be Christmas carols sung by a chorus choir of 28 voices. The entire church membership is invited to take part in the "White Service" Sunday night. The cast for the pageant includes: Prompts, Bill Hindley, Clifton Hill, William Fox and Ben Hargrove; Joseph, J. C. Dekle; Mary, Mrs. Joe Dekle; Angel of Announcement, Thelma Firestone; Watchman, Charles Perry; Travelers, L. W. Perkins, W. W. Woodford, Shepherds, Leland Mann, Pat Gallagher, William Fox and Bill Hindley; Angels, Thelma Firestone, Billie Gossick, Joy Cloud, Ruth Stafford, Frances Jamison, Mrs. Pat Gallagher, Ruby Cowan; the Guiding Star, Helen Chambers; Wise Men, Clarence Stubblebine, Gordon Moore, and Ben Hargrove; Guardian

Angel, Mrs. Murphy Nesbit; Boy, Robert Sherman; Spirit of Christmas, Roberta Kilpatrick.

Service.

A union service will be held at 7 o'clock Christmas morning at the First Baptist church. This will be the seventh annual service sponsored by the young people of the Protestant churches of Atlanta and arranged for through the Young People's commission of the Christian council. Graham Clark, chairman of the commission, in announcing the service, said that while prepared by the young people, the program is for the enjoyment of people of all ages. The Rev. Richard T. Gillespie, pastor of the Rock Springs Presbyterian church, will bring the Christmas message. The musical program will be in charge of L. G. Nilsson, director of the cathedral choir. The choir will sing at the Christmas morning service. The American Legion Christmas tree service will be held Monday, Christmas Eve night, at 5 o'clock at the cathedral. The cathedral junior choir and Service League will sing. Arthur Davis, organist and master of the cathedral chorists, announced an organ melode of Christmas music for the Sunday services.

Park Street Methodist church will have special musical services Sunday morning and Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Program of Music.

The Christmas music of the North Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday morning will include an organ prelude, "Christmas Pastoral," by Rogers; voluntary, "Glory to God in the Highest," by Perzole; Gervasi's "A Joyous Christmas Song"; an organ melode of Christmas music for the Sunday services.

The Fortified Hills Baptist church will hold special morning and evening Christmas services and the choir and orchestra will render special Christmas musical numbers.

The choir of the Druid Hills Methodist church, under the direction of Miss M. Ethel Beyer, church organist and choir director, will present its third annual Christmas carol service at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening.

Deatur First Methodist church will present special Christmas music morning following the sermon by the pastor, Dr. Walter Holcomb, on "The Incarnation of Love."

Druid Hills Presbyterian church will present the cantata, "The Story of Christmas," by Matthews, at the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning.

Pageant at Bethel.

The Bethel Methodist church, of Adamsville, will observe the Christmas season at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night with a pageant, "The Christmas Story in Scripture and Song."

Capitol View Methodist church will present a pageant entitled "My Song and My Star" at the Sunday evening service.

The Baptist tabernacle will hold two Christmas services Sunday. Dr. W. H. Knight will preach morning and night.

the north, although by virtue of the title of our column we have been some two thousand miles north of our track. What have we in Georgia that corresponds to the cycle? Nothing at all so far as is known. That is if you count only fluctuations of animal populations that are periodical. Here we will discuss the irregularity of the scarcely less remarkable phenomenon that we call irruptive die-offs. They evidently do not take place with any degree of regularity, nor are all species of animals affected at the same time.

During this little discussion of population behavior in Georgia, I want you to remember that it is all fragfew to be of any blue. It is my own observation over a ten year period that leads me to suspect a certain fluctuation in the chipmunks. In 1924 and '25, according to my notes, there were a lot of chipmunks around Atlanta. They more or less completely disappeared during the succeeding four

BEER TAX ACTION BEING CONSIDERED

Court Hears Motion To Dismiss, Then Takes Case Under Advisement

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District of Columbia supreme court, today took under advisement a motion of the government to dismiss the equity suit of H. A. Emery, restaurant owner of Atlanta, Ga., who seeks to prevent the collection of a $1,000 special tax from him for selling beer.

Attorneys Welborn B. Cody, of Atlanta, and John E. McGuire, of the Washington law firm of Miller & Chevalier, argued against the motion on behalf of Emery, and Assistant District Attorney H. L. Underwood appeared for the government. The original action was directed against T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue, and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau.

In opposing dismissal of the action Attorney Cody cited an Alabama case in which Federal Judge Robert T. Erwin overruled a motion of government attorneys to dismiss a petition asking a restraining order against collection of the excise tax on Mobile. Judge Erwin ruled that the federal "excise tax" levying a $1,000 tax for the selling of liquors and beers was a penalty and not a tax.

Georgia and Alabama now are the only states in which 3.2 beer is illegal. Georgia, however, has "local option" licenses and beer is sold by various municipalities. Counsel for the defendants asked the court to decline jurisdiction "because what is here involved is a matter of vital importance and concern to the government."

Emery's counsel contended that the taxpayer in the case did not seek to enjoin the collection of the beer tax, "however invalid it might be," and pointed out that the Emery did desire was a declaration by the court which would be res adjudicata as to all parties, so that the future conduct of Emery's business could be considered, and if the tax was held to be valid, he could discontinue his business.

"Our petition shows," said Cody, "that Emery's business would not be profitable if the tax is held valid. If the tax is held invalid, however, then Emery can continue his business, knowing that a liability at the rate of $1,000 a year is not accruing."

Further grounds advanced by the government why the bill of complaint should be dismissed were: (1) violation of the act of June 14, 1934, would defeat the express purpose of Section 3224 of the revised statutes, United States Code, title 26, section 154, by allowing to be done by individual that which is prohibited by that section, namely, the maintenance of a suit to restrain the collection of the tax and, (2) the collector of internal revenue for the district of Atlanta was a necessary and indispensable party to the proceedings, since his right, power and duty as collector was sought to be determined.

The matter upon which the declaratory judgment is being sought by Emery, a citizen of Georgia, who operates a restaurant at 70 Fair street, S. W., Atlanta, wherein he dispenses 3.2 per cent beer, invokes the payment of a tax to the United States, pursuant to section 701 of the revenue act of 1926.

This section provides that: "There shall be levied, collected and paid annually... a special excise tax of $1,000 in the case of every person carrying on the business of a brewer, distiller, wholesaler, liquor dealer, wholesale dealer in malt liquor, retail dealer in malt liquor... in any state... contrary to the laws of such state..."

Organizer Accused In U. T. W. Hearing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Testimony that a United Textile Workers organizer had presented himself as a representative of the government and had said he had the "personal backing" of President Roosevelt was received today by the textile labor board.

It was given at the board's second hearing into charges the Rosemary Manufacturing Company, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., had discriminated against 10 union employees by not giving them their jobs back after the September strike.

The testimony came from the Rev. J. N. Bynum, rector of Roanoke Rapids Episcopal church. Bill Pace, a Rosemary employee, and J. D. Crumpler, a former member of the U. T. W., in Roanoke Rapids.

J. Dooley, the organizer referred to, heard the testimony and flatly denied he had made such statements. He declared the only reference to the president in his speeches had been to the fact that the chief executive wished to see labor organized for collective bargaining under Section 7-A of the national recovery act.

Housing Corporation Officials See Plan as Outlet for Heavy Industry

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Federal insured loans to give industry up-to-date machinery were said authoritatively today to be the basis of proposed new legislation being worked out by officials of the Federal Housing Corporation.

Official sources, which declined to be quoted by name, contended such legislation would give a potential outlet of from $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 of steel, iron and other capital goods. A simple change in the housing act, it was said, would accomplish the result sought.

Along with this amendment, these officials added, there was under contemplation one which would help to provide a ready market for mortgages obtained by the housing corporation. This was described as one of the difficulties that so far had slowed the lending of the corporation for home building and modernization.

To achieve this purpose, officials said, a mortgage discount agency probably would be set up. Such an agency would handle not only mortgages for home loans but prospective loans from the plant modernization insurance plan.

One official who has made a recent tour of the country said there was no doubt but that business would be quick to take advantage of a provision for such loans.

"They have orders on hand for goods which they can't fill because of the lack of facilities," he said.

He added that other methods by which credit might be liberalized were being contemplated.

The plan for modernization loans would be handled by the housing corporation and these mortgages given the same discounting outlet that is contemplated for housing mortgages.

One official said: "Even in 1929 a large proportion of the plant and equipment of American industry was far below standard. Attention had been centered on the dramatic new industries like automobiles where plant and equipment were relatively new and modern."

"Attention has been diverted from the old industries like textiles and food products where plants had been built years before the modern scientific management had been formulated and where in the 20's income had not been high enough to permit constant overhauling."

"This is particularly true of New England, the middle Atlantic states, and other centers of industrial development preceding the war."

Two suspects jailed After Safe Is Opened

The crash of breaking glass early Saturday morning attracted the attention of five Atlanta detectives to the rear of the Hobart Manufacturing Company plant at 340 Marietta street.

Two men were seen running across the railroad tracks. The detectives ordered the men to stop. When they disobeyed the command, the detectives fired their pistols in the air. One of the men, who gave his name as Paul Rivers, 28, of a Jones street address, stopped. Detectives stated that when they searched him they found percussion fuses in his pockets. He was arrested and held on "suspicion."

Detectives gave chase and within 30 minutes Detectives C. E. McCrory and J. D. Buice had arrested in a Ford street lunch room a man who gave his name as John N. "Slim" Murphy, alias "Slim" Cook, of a local hotel. He was held on "suspicion."

Detectives E. S. Acree, Hiram Davis and J. W. Nations, investigating the damage at the Hobart plant, found the safe had been opened by jamming the combination. George Sweeney, office manager of the company, said that the safe-crackers had taken only $4.78 from the safe, including one torn dollar bill which had been pinned together.

Man Badly Injured By Hit-and-Run Auto

Ray Awtry, of 377 Hood street, was admitted to Grady hospital Friday night with a broken leg, received when he was knocked down by a hit-and-run driver on Hunter street, near Fraser street. He also is under observation at the hospital for possible internal injuries.

Knocked down, according to police reports, at Delta place and Woodmont avenue, Friday night by a car driven by John Dobbs, of a Nelson Ferry drive, Decatur, address, W. M. Jefferson, 33, of 880 Euclid avenue, N. E., was admitted to Grady hospital with a fractured left leg. Dobbs reported the accident to police. No case was made.

A. E. Bridges, of Route 3, Brown Mill road, was treated at Grady hospital Friday night for a lacerated ear, injured, he told police, when his automobile was forced off Stewart avenue by a car driven by a man who was over an embankment near Lakewood avenue.

Homes Bombed.
ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The homes of two jurors in the trial of the alleged assassins of former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos were bombed last night. As a result, police protection was given to all jurors in the case.

Judge M. D. Dickerson Starts New Term

Judge M. D. Dickerson, of Douglas, who presides over the Waycross superior court circuit, was sworn in by Governor Eugene Talmadge Friday for another term of four years to which he was elected without opposition in the September primary. Judge Dickerson is shown on the left taking his oath of office while his friend, Senator J. H. Milhollin, of Broxton, looks on. Judge Dickerson was here Friday for a meeting of the board of regents, of which he is a member, and the governor decided to swear him in and eliminate the necessity of a trip to Atlanta later. Foot-Tapping Ends Policeman's Yawning

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A big "yawn malady" case came to an end today when two physicians tickled the victim's feet and pressed on foot nerves.

The treatment cured George Van Cleave, 31, special policeman for a South Chicago steel plant, who had been yawning since yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Albert Slepian and Dr. Irving Mishkin tapped him on the sole of the feet with a rubber-headed hammer. Suddenly Van Cleave gasped for breath, then began to breathe normally. The yawning had stopped.

Mrs. Harold McKee, of Round Grove, Ill., who yawned continually for more than a week, was released yesterday from the Sterling (Ill.) hospital, declared virtually cured.

Mrs. W. Bryan Lee, 33, of 833 East Lake drive, died at her home Friday morning after an illness of several months. Mrs. Lee was for several years a popular employee of The Atlanta Constitution, where she had charge of the information desk on the ground floor. At that time she was known as Miss "Bill" Sanders.

She is survived by her husband, a son, W. Bryan Lee Jr., five sisters, Mrs. P. B. Agnew, of Atlanta; Mrs. P. M. Agan, of Gadsden; Mrs. L. H. Dobbs, of Birmingham; Mrs. J. A. Hunter, of Chattanooga; and Miss Virge Sanders, of Cedarhurst, two brothers, A. G. Sanders, of Atlanta, and W. A. Sanders, of Cedarhurst.

The funeral will be conducted at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the chapel of Avtry and Lowndes, with the Rev. A. D. Couch officiating and burial will be in West View cemetery.

Mrs. Lena H. Whittle, mother-in-law of Councilman Raleigh E. Drennon, died Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sanford Bestman, in Miami, Fla.

A native of Butler, Ga., Mrs. Whittle had lived in Atlanta most of her life. She made her home here with her daughter, Mrs. Drennon, at 551 Moreland avenue, N. E., and spent the winters in Miami at the home of Mrs. Bearman.

She was prominently identified with the affairs of the Riverside Baptist church, Miami.

In addition to Mrs. Drennon and Mrs. Bearman, she also is survived by two other daughters, Mrs. Willie West, of Piedmont, Ala., and Mrs. Fannie M. Bamber, a son, A. Heath, and a daughter, Mrs. Drennon, at Davidson College, North Carolina, and three brothers, E. E. Heath, of Reynolds, Ga.; W. H. Heath, of Lanett, Ala.; and C. L. Funderburg, of Tallapoosa, Georgia.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

Cummings Will Ask
More Crime Weapons

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Attorney-General Cummings wants more men, ammunition and other weapons to fight crime and he plans to ask congress for the money to get them.

He also said Thursday that he intended to ask for an appropriation of $12,000 for each of the families of the eight government agents killed in line of duty since the division of investigation was formed back in 1908.

The attorney-general said that only "hand-picked" lawyers and accountants—recently graduated from college—will be enlisted as federal agents.

The little army of federal men now numbers 568. A year ago the division totalled 387 agents.

Surveys of the latest models of rifles, machine guns, revolvers, gas bombs and high-powered squad cars are now under way in anticipation that congress might grant the funds requested.

SON WALKS AGAIN WITH BONES GIVEN BY HIS OWN MOTHER

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Charles B. Seale, 19, walked across a room in his home today, each halting stride the hoped-for Christmas gift to his mother.

For five dreary years Mrs. B. H. Seale sacrificed and gave unstinting devotion to her son, who suffered an affliction that made bones in his legs so brittle they broke from ordinary tumbles. She gave parts of her bones to cure him.

But today, with the merry yuletide at hand, both forgot the sacrifices, the suffering of seven operations and the 31 months of confinement in a clinic at Rochester, Minn., as Charles slowly took half dozen steps.

Surgeons said Charles' legs are now under way in anticipation that congress might grant the funds requested.

GREEN IS ALARMED
BY JOB DECREASE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor, speaking last as Secretary Perkins announced a November decrease in industrial pay rolls, today declared the unemployment problem was growing steadily more gloomy.

Putting the number of jobs at 10,672,000 in October, an increase of more than half a million over its figures for the same month last year, the federation drew an optimistic picture for the immediate future of business and industry.

"Even though the summer decline in business ended in September and production of our industries has been rising slowly since then and promises to keep on rising until next spring, nevertheless, business observers expect a rise to be quite moderate," the federation said in its monthly business survey.

"There is no likelihood that it will lift production or employment above the levels of last May when 10,248,000 were out of work."

"Clearly we cannot count on private industry to find productive work for the unemployed soon. The recovery program of 1933 lifted production 19 per cent above the low levels of 1932, but we have made little progress since 1933."

Secretary Perkins declared herself not displeased by an 86,000 decline in industrial employment from October to November. She asserted the drop was smaller than usual, and that employment in non-manufacturing industries had increased.

While Miss Perkins and a cabinet committee wrestled with a projected social security plan, including unemployment insurance, and the White House gave thought to sizeable funds to relieve distress, the federation declared "unemployment relief is America's most urgent problem today."

Saying that the number of those dependent on relief had increased by 5,000,000 since September, last year, the federation stated relief costs had jumped from $39,200,000 in September, 1933, to $185,000,000 in the same months this year when the pay of FVA and CCC employees was included.

The federation then questioned whether the slow speed of the industrial machine was not due to a desire by employers to strike against collective bargaining guarantees of the recovery act. It cited several actions by business organizations as opposing the continuance of section 7-A.

INTERPRETER USES
SULTAN'S DAGGER
TO HELP SEAMAN

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A holy kris—a small golden dagger—once the property of a Malay sultan—was used by officials at Ellis island today to get the story of a seaman who talked in a strange language.

The man produced seaman's papers, and with a few words of English, made it known he was a sailor who had jumped ship. To learn further details, the immigration men started a search for someone who could speak Atchak, Batak, Bugi, Dyak, Lampong, Makassar, Malay, Nikobar, or Rejang.

They finally found an interpreter in Dr. Cassio Adams, former curator of the Brooklyn museum, an Austrian who had spent years in the Indies. He came, bringing with him the kris which had been presented to him by the sultan of Solo, a Malay potentate of Java.

The kris, he said, would convince the sailor he should tell the truth, for such a weapon would be presented by the sultan only to someone whom he respected most highly.

At sight of the kris, the young man's eyes bulged. He said he was a native of Singapore, had jumped ship at Beaumont, Texas, last September, had only $30 left, and was tired of the United States. His name was Umar Thir Ben, 22, former seaman of the British freighter City of Dun Kirk.

Rudolph Reimer, commissioner of immigration and naturalization, said application would be made to the British consulate for traveling papers for Umar as a seaman.

Misses Haven, Brown Honored at Tea At Beers Home

Miss Frances Haven and Miss Eliza Grace Brown, two of the most-esteemed members of the debutante coterie, were honor guests at the tea at which Mrs. H. W. Beers and her daughter, Miss Judy Beers, entertained Friday at their home in Druid Hills.

Christmas foliage combined with poinsettias, Richmond roses and narcissi formed the attractive decorations in the reception apartments of the home. An effective white and silver motif featured the appointments of the tea table in the dining room. Overlaid with a handsome cloth of Point de Venise, the table was centered with a platter of white roses, carnations, bouvardia and narcissi, from which fell a graceful cascade of silver grapes and other small silver fruits. Burnings in silver candlesticks were tall white tapered caught with sprays of silver ferns.

Mrs. Beers, Miss Beers and the debutantes received the guests, standing before a mass of palms and ferns, interspersed with tall floor standards filled with white chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Beers wore a handsome gown of black velvet, with a sequin jacket and a cluster of purple orchids. Miss Beers was an attractive figure, wearing hyacinth-blue lace handed in mink fur, and a spray of gardenias. Miss Haven chose for the occasion a robe of style of blue affeta, offset with a nosegay of American Beauty roses. Miss Brown's lovely costume was of aquamarine blue crepe fashioned with a Queen Anne collar of lace. Her flowers were valley lilies.

Mrs. Harrison Hines and Mrs. Ernest Brown, mothers of the honor guests, presided at the table and coffee tables, and assisting in entertaining were Mesdames John K. Ottley, S. T. Tupper, Davis B. Thornton, Robert Cousins, Frank M. Berry, Faison Hines, Phillip L. Enge, Gilbert Beers and Miss Kate Carroll.

A group of the debutantes and younger set assisting included Misses Adelaide Fleming, Mary Spalding Dean, Florrie Adkins, Suzanne Knox, Epsie Dallas, Julian Boykin, Laura Troutman, Deas Smith, Marian Yundt, Lundy Sharp, Clara Lavery, Eleanor Terhune, Alice Davis, Elizabeth L'Engle, Ellen Fleming and Frances Austin.

John R. Wilkinson O.E.S. Installs Officers.

Appropriate installation ceremonies were held recently at the John R. Wilkinson chapter, O. E. S., completing the administration of Mrs. Ruth Whitfield, worthy matron, and Clarence Whitfield, worthy patron, of this chapter for the year 1934. The incoming matron, Mrs. Leone Nolan, was escorted to her station by the grand marshal under an archway of white wands, topped with silver stars, and preceded by her little daughter, Mary Ellen, who scattered rose petals, and Mesdames Maybelle Thomas and Emma Leila McConnell, associate conductors. Mrs. Nolan, the beautiful Star of the East, the associate matron, Mrs. May Belle Thomas, was escorted to her station, preceded by little Doris Jett scattering roses, and Mrs. Roberts sang "Star of the West."

Installing officers were Mesdames Marcia Jewett, grand associate matron of the grand chapter of Georgia, grand installing officer; Pauline Dillon, Nina Mae Leslie, worthy matron of Kirkwood chapter; Beasie Jones and Gladys Trice. The following officers were installed: Mrs. J. E. Haley, worthy matron; Mrs. May Belle Thomas, associate matron; J. H. Landers, associate matron; Mrs. Whitfield, retiring worthy matron; Mrs. Elliott, secretary; Mrs. Lena Bearden, treasurer; Mrs. Ella Beard, conductress; Mrs. Emma Leila McConnell, associate conductress; Mrs. Maybelle Thomas, chaplain; Mrs. Battle Allen, marshal; Mrs. Belle Haley, organist; Miss Dorothy Whitfield, Adah; Mrs. Gertrude Brown, Ruth; Mrs. Bernice Dutton, Esther; Mrs. Effie Jett, Martha; Mrs. Lucy Pugh, Electa; Mrs. B. W. Ellison, warbler; Thomas Bearden, sentinel.

The outgoing worthy matron, Mrs. Ruth Whitfield, and retiring worthy patron, Clarence Whitfield, were escorted to the altar, where they were presented with emblematic jewelry of past matron and past patron, in a glowing tribute of love and appreciation for the year's work by Mrs. Eunice Bucklew, Mrs. Whitfield, retiring worthy matron, was showered with beautiful gifts by officers and friends in appreciation of her efforts for the welfare of the chapter during 1934. Others receiving gifts were Mesdames Eunice Bucklew, May Belle Thomas, Ella Beard and Alice Gibbs, and gifts were presented to the installing officers, Mrs. Ruth Whitfield, retiring worthy matron, and her officers with gifts of silver.

Miss Ruth Brawner Is Dance Hostess.

Miss Ruth Brawner entertained 200 members of the college set at a Christmas dance at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. James N. Brawner, at 2800 Peachtree road, on Friday evening, honoring the Pi Pi sorority and the members of the Sigma Chi fraternity of Emory University. Miss Brawner was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Brawner, and her sisters, Mrs. Dave Miller and Mrs. William Hightower, and by her brother, Charles Brawner.

Miniature Christmas trees adorned with tinsel and colored ornaments, placed either end of the mantel in the living room. The lace-covered table in the dining room was centered with a basket filled with poinsettias and silver balls and was encircled by silver candlesticks holding red candles.

Miss Brawner, the lovely hostess, was gowned in light green crepe, trimmed with emerald and rhinestone clips, and she wore a shoulder spray of orchids.

4-Hi Club Meets.

The 4-Hi Club of Hammond school at Sandy Springs met Thursday in the woman's clubhouse. Mrs. M. H. Nance, president of the Woman's Club, presided over the business meeting.

Miss Christine Burdette, president of the 4-Hi Club, presided over the meeting of the girl members of the club. Christmas carols were sung.

Miss Opal Ward, Fulton county demonstrator, and Miss Ruby Nance, her assistant, prepared beautiful figurative Christmas candy of chocolate fudge and coconut candy, which was served to the attendants. There was a splendid representation of the club girls and club women.

Miss Cooper and Mr. Bell Wed At Impressive Home Ceremony

MRS. CHARLES CLINTON BELL.

Dignity and simplicity marked the wedding of Miss Alice Rosalie Cooper to Charles Clinton Bell, which took place in the presence of relatives and close friends on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Cooper.

The house was decorated with a profusion of smilax and lighted by candelabra. The ceremony took place before an altar of palms. Preceding the ceremony, "Poinsettia" by Elsie Bell, of Canton; Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Bell, of Carrollton; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Christopher, of Barnsville; and Misses Fannie B. McClure and Charlotte McClure, of Acworth, Ga.

The bride is a great-granddaughter of the Honorable Mark A. Cooper and the late Mr. and Mrs. Adah Reed Smith. On her maternal side she is a granddaughter of the late Major and Mrs. R. J. Bacon, of Baconton, being descended from the Bacon family of Liberty county, Ga., and the Waltons of Wilkes county. She is a graduate of Girls' High school and Agnes Scott College, and is a member of the faculty of Fulton High school.

Mr. Bell is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Bell, of Canton, Ga., and a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell, of Canton, Ga. On his maternal side, he is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Newton. Mr. Bell is employed by the Federal District Project Audit Office, with headquarters in Atlanta. After January 1, Mr. and Mrs. Bell will be at home at 67 East Thirteenth street.

Miss Dallas Makes Formal Bow At Brilliant Ball at Driving Club

Amid a scene depicting a winter wonderland, Miss Epsie Dallas led the cotillion with Thomas B. Paine last evening which was the outstanding feature of the brilliant supper dance given at the Piedmont Driving Club by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Dallas, the occasion marking the formal introduction to Atlanta society of their lovely debutante daughter, Miss Dallas.

Shining honors on this occasion was Miss Ann Phelan Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barry Wright, of Rome, and a cousin of Miss Dallas. Mrs. Wright being the former Miss M. A. Phelan, of Atlanta. Miss Wright is an admired and attractive member of the schoolgirl contingent and attends the Coucher College in Baltimore.

The affair was numbered among most brilliant on the winter social calendar and the cotillion, always effective, was never more enjoyable or attractive than lead by the lovely debutante and Mr. Paine and in which all the guests took part. Hats and horns given the vanguard as favors added a note of merriment to the occasion and in the last figure variety colored balloons and confetti were released which transformed the handsome ballroom of the club into a fairyland. Prizes were awarded the young couple capturing the lucky number balloon.

Assembling at 10 o'clock members of unmarried social circles gathered to meet Miss Dallas, who is one of the most popular and widely feted members of the current debutante club. Forming a receiving line with Mr. and Mrs. Dallas were Misses Epsie and Daisy Dallas and Miss Wright. They stood before an effective grouping of palms, ferns, green and red poinsettia and the many beautiful floral tributes sent the charming

Junior Chamber Gives Annual Xmas Dinner at East Lake Club

Representatives of the three Atlanta daily newspapers and newly-elected officers and directors of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce were honor guests Friday evening at the annual Christmas dinner given by the Junior Chamber at the East Lake Country Club. Yuletide decorations prevailed throughout the club and the beautifully decorated tables at which the hosts and guests were seated were graced by crimson-colored flowers combined with smilax.

Clifford Hendrix, retiring president of the Junior Chamber, presided during the dinner and introduced Everett G. Jackson, newly-elected president. A feature of the occasion was the presentation to Mr. Hendrix of a handsome fitted bag from members of the Junior Chamber in behalf of his splendid leadership during the past year. Mrs. Hendrix was introduced by Mr. Hendrix and presented with an attractive bag. Luke Arnold represented Mayor James L. Key at the dinner and extended greetings in behalf of the city's chief executive. Herbert Choate, past president of Atlanta's senior Chamber of Commerce, represented the president, Wiley Moore, who is ill at the Georgia Baptist hospital. W. R. Ulrich, executive secretary of the senior Chamber, was also present.

A number of prominent out-of-town presidents of Junior Chambers of Commerce were present with their wives, including Mr. and Mrs. Porterfield Sheppard, of Manchester, Ga.;

Debutantes Will Give Christmas Party To Nursery Children

Members of the debutante circle will bestow happiness and joy upon the children at the Cornelia Moore Day Nursery today at 2:30 o'clock when they will act as hostesses at the Christmas party given in honor of the children and their mothers, at 408 Washington street.

These children were adopted by the debutantes as their charitable project this year, and they have entered into the preparations for the party with zeal and enthusiasm. An exquisitely decorated tree will hold gifts for everybody, and a basket filled with goodies will be presented. The Christmas tree is adorned with hundreds of lights, gleaming silver tinsel, gaily colored ornaments, and boxes of candy to be distributed by Santa Claus.

Hostesses were Misses Louise Roberts, Rena Candler, Dorothy Ewing, Mary Ann Carr, Octavia Riley, Maude Thompson, Florrie Adkins, Marie Askew, Martha Lee Bowman, Frances Weiman, Anne Boyd Croton, Dorothy Brumby, Josephine Clayton, Louise Calhoun, Epsie Dallas, Mary Dean, Grace Eve, Adelaide Fleming, Justine Gresham, Frances Haven, Sarah Hewlett, Mary Cobb Hummelt, Mary Irby, Kathryn Jett, Suzanne Knox, Jacquita Leggett, Betty McHuffie, Louise MacIntyre, Frances North, Laura Lee Pattillo, Lamar Peschau, Barbara Prater, Ellen Rhodes, Deas Smith, Lucia Smith, Mary Thiesene, Laura Troutman, Frances Weiman, Marion Yundt, Josephine Meador, Julian Boykin, Lucy Yundt, Elsie Grace Brown and others.

Members of the Cornelia Moore Nursery are Mesdames Floyd McRae Jr., Harrison Jones, Hugh Hodgson, Henry B. Tompkins, Rucker McCarty, Lewis Greer, Ewell Gay, J. D. Osborne, Joel Hurt Jr., Glenville Giddings, Raymond Demere, of Savannah, and J. J. Ragan, of Blackshear, Ga.

Bird and Flower Club Holds Meeting.

Mrs. Alva D. Kiser entertained the Bird and Flower Club at her home Monday with a Christmas party, and Mrs. Alexander Dahl, the vice president, presided. Mrs. S. P. Booth reported about $25 made at a benefit bridge recently held by the club, and Mrs. E. E. Terry reported over 50 telephone calls made during December owing to postponement of meeting.

The president, Mrs. C. J. Sheehan, was given a rising vote of thanks by the club for the interest and loyalty she displayed during the past year. The club voted to send $20 to the Unorganized Cheerful Givers, sponsored by the Atlanta Journal, thus doubling the amount sent last year. Mrs. Alva D. Kiser, as honorary president, and organizer of the club, was chosen to present the check to the U. C. G., with the hopes it might bring a cheer to lonely hearts. Mrs. J. U. Horton gave a very interesting paper on "Winter Bouquets," advising the use of some of the berried shrubs and broad-leaved evergreens for interior decorating, and urged the conservation of native holly. Mrs. J. L. McCord read a poem by Whittier on the "Joy of Giving," and Mrs. Alexander Dahl read one of Edgar Guest's, "Christmas Eve."

A social hour followed, with Mrs. L. R. Kersh, of Alabama who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Thomas I. Bryant, of the Bryant road, a special guest. The hostess, Mrs. Alva D. Kiser, entertained the members with a seated luncheon, the table being beautifully decorated in keeping with the Christmas season. A large, lighted tree stood in the corner of the room, under which were placed the gifts brought by the members for each other. Mrs. Henry Johnson, showered the club with Christmas cards.

WHAT WAS SOME MORE? Spencer Cannon, Gotham's leading citizen, finding too little time to attend to his diversified interests, had just made Mark Sturges manager of the Iron Block, the city's foremost department store, which his father founded—the cornerstone of the growing Cannon fortune. Cannon's daughter Edythe, who has been away, returns into Mark's office, introduces herself and tells him as it were, the Cannon home. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT II.

Besides being sole owner of the department store, whose name already was "Sturges' pet aversion, Spencer Cannon was president of the city's strongest bank, as well as a director of two others. Extensive real estate holdings were among his assets, including the one skyscraper boasted by the municipality, the Cannon Tower, with its 30 floors. The largest and most fashionable church in Gotham was cryptically referred to as "his." One of Sturges' informants offered a pleasant surprise to the effect that the mayor and council were at home in the Cannon vest pocket. It was the steadily growing demand upon the merchant's time that led to his search for a progressive young executive to take over the management of The Iron Block, his pet interest—the one wherein his father had laid the foundation for the family fortune.

With these bits of information presented to him during the early negotiations, Sturges envisaged his prospective employer as a lean and leathery individual. To some reason, the name Cannon suggested a gray atmosphere. Gray clothing and gray hair, probably, gray sideburns, closely trimmed and meeting the corners of a tight mouth. The Gotham magnate would be a modern Scrooge, suave, but hard. Very hard.

On the contrary, Spencer Cannon proved to be a short rotund man who waddled. His feet were large and toed out in a fashion suggestive of a penguin, a similarity heightened by the white spots that usually were a part of an immaculate costume. From the moment of their first meeting, Sturges found himself quite fascinated by the Cannon eyes. They were small, peculiarly round eyes. Pale blue in color. They seemed set always in a vacant unsmiling stare, focused vaguely. They gave the unpleasant impression of being without lids. Fishy. That was pretty close to it. And the corners of the fat mouth had the strange habit of flickering. It seemed a mechanical attempt at a smile—one that never found reflection in the eyes.

The man's hands were soft and pudgy, always moist to the touch. "You are down early today, my dear," was his greeting when he appeared in the doorway at his daughter's call.

test's call. The words were uttered in a voice as soft as the white fingers that toyed with the heavy watch chain festooned across the protruding waistcoat. It was very nearly a purr.

"You broke," was Edythe's complacent reply.

Cannon's inexpressive eyes moved to Sturges. The corners of his mouth flickered. "That's what it is to be a father," he volunteered. "I'll be with you in a moment, Edythe." Here, the older man came forward, displaying a bunch of papers he had been holding behind him. "I wish, Sturges, you would glance through these. They're in reference to... But you'll have to read them. Perhaps you'd better have Nettie find you the complete file. There's one point particularly important."

He spread a paper on the desk and traced the printed lines back and forth with a blunt forefinger, muttering under his breath. Mark observed that the pendant locket on his wrist was wet.

Edythe strolled over to a mirror that hung above a cabinet, and busied herself with some repair to her red mouth. She tilted her head to one side and studied the result.

"Oh, Daddy," Cannon did not look up from his papers.

"Did you know that Sawyer girl is working in the store? Didn't you notice in the dresses. I noticed her when I came in."

"Wh? Who's that? Sawyer, did you say?"

"Of course." There was a touch of petulance in the voice before the mirror. "You know perfectly well whom I mean."

"Yes, yes... I must ask Mr. Sturges what he was thinking about. Here you are... This paragraph. You see..."

"Mr. Cannon, please."

This new interruption came from the door of Spencer's room. His secretary, Nettie Howard, stood peering in apologetically. "Mr. Hodson is calling. Shall I say you are in?"

"Tell him I'm not in. I'll take the call now. See me later, Sturges. No hurry." And he waddled out hastily.

Edythe followed her parent leisurely. Before she closed the door, she flashed a smile at Mark over her shoulder.

"Sunday at 6," she reminded. "I'll send the car to your hotel."

That Cannon girl must have inherited her good looks from her mother, was Sturges' thought as he reached for a fresh cigarette. The papers were forgotten for the moment.

And she certainly was easy to look at... just as difficult to figure. That listless air struck him as being assumed. The pose of boredom. It seemed the social season had opened. A Sunday night supper in Arden Terrace... wherever that might be.

The prospective guest was left with the uncomfortable feeling he had not been favored with an invitation, after all. It was a summons—no less.

And her chance remark about "that Sawyer girl" was it only a chance remark? Did Miss Cannon wish him to know that she kept a finger on the employees here? It was very evident she had no liking for the girl in question. That was her bearing into.

As Sturges reached for a memorandum pad, he chanced to see a crumpled white glove lying on the desk. He picked it up and examined it idly. A faint odor of gardenia again. Tossing it aside, he scribbled on his pad.

"Sawyer—see Stewart."

Within an hour from the time of leaving Sturges' room, Spencer Cannon and Edythe appeared on the fourth floor. The merchant made his way directly to the office of Emory Stewart. The latter changed to be at his desk, dictating. Recognizing his visitors, the dress department head hurriedly dismissed his stenographer and came forward with a smile.

"Good morning, Mr. Cannon... How are you, Miss Edythe? Please come in."

Cannon stood staring around the display room. "I say, Stewart."

"I understand you have John Sawyer's girl on your pay roll. Is that so?"

Stewart's tall form stiffened slightly. His lips compressed under his close-cropped moustache.

"That is correct, sir. Miss Sawyer has been with us for several weeks. She is doing some excellent work, too. You know..."

"Get rid of her," interrupted the soft voice. Cannon stared hard at his subordinate. "At once."

"But, sir..."

As time goes on, I hope that producers will learn that long, careful study should go into programs for boys and girls, as well as for grown folk. Children in general do not care to be called "kiddies," nor do they enjoy having anyone "talk down" to them.

Programs which make young listeners feel that they are good, no matter how "exciting" they may be. Those who have studied the growth of the human mind declare that it harms a person to make him fearful in childhood. Many complaints of parents have been about this type of radio program.

Moving pictures are another field where work needs to be done. There are excellent movies, but in my opinion there are not nearly enough. It is too bad that money and time should be wasted in making, or watching, pictures of low value.

I look forward to the time when we shall do far more to bring about moving pictures which will enrich our lives. At present there are pictures of an educational nature, but the number is small compared with what we should have. The greater talent is put into making educational pictures, they will be well received by the public.

"At once, I said." The pale eyes seemed to harden. "I am very much surprised, Stewart, at your lack of judgment. That is all." He moved away, followed by Edythe. Stewart remained near the door for a moment in deep thought. Then he seemed to be recalled to the situation by the steady regard of a pair of brown eyes watching him from across the big room. He beckoned with a reluctant finger and a girl, the one whom Sturges had found sketching by the window, came to him at once. Before Stewart could speak she observed quietly:

"I saw it. Mr. Cannon doesn't want me here."

There was no trace of resentment or surprise in her voice. It was a fact to be accepted—nothing more.

"Come in, Jean. I want to talk to you."

Stewart closed his door against a chance intruder and pointed to a chair beside the desk. The girl called Jean made no move to take it.

"I was afraid I might get you into some trouble," she remarked in the same detached manner. "I'm ever so sorry. Of course I'll go... And thank you for your advice."

"Don't be hasty, Jean. You're quite right... about the boss. He wouldn't let me explain, but he must. When he realizes how unfair he is, I'm sure..."

"I'd rather you didn't, Mr. Stewart. It's all right."

"Of course I will! It's an outrage for me to... Come in!" he snapped irritably, as a knock sounded on the door. "Oh... Mr. Sturges."

Mark's eyes lighted with sudden interest as he recognized the artist.

"Mr. Sturges, I want you to meet one of my girls... Jean Sawyer. She's doing some fine work for us as an artist and designer. She thinks she must leave and I don't see how we can spare her. Perhaps you can persuade her to change her mind."

A sudden shrewdness in Stewart's face. "My I ask you something first?"

"Of course."

"According to a letter I have on file, the matter of the store personnel is under your direction. Am I right?"

"Quite right, Mr. Sturges. I'll be his questioner. Why?"

"I wanted to be sure. Please see if you can't make Miss Sawyer reconsider her decision. If you'll excuse me, I'll be back in a moment."

He turned and left the room, carefully ignoring the appealing gaze in the girl's brown eyes.

"A right, Miss Sawyer. Let's talk it over."

Sturges smiled in his friendliest fashion and seated himself informally on the edge of his desk. He turned to his companion at her ease.

"I'm afraid there's nothing to talk about," was the quiet reply. "I have made up my mind. I don't want to leave."

"Sorry to hear it. I'm rather a crank about such matters... It always worries me to lose a good employee. Makes me think perhaps the firm has fallen down on the job."

"Oh, it isn't that at all..." Jean Sawyer admitted with a sudden flash of earnestness. "I love it here. I've made up my mind. I don't want to leave."

"Fine! Mr. Stewart has just given you a good recommendation... very good. It's a question of money?"

"No, no..."

"A better job somewhere else?"

"No, sir. Please..."

"Please mean a bit personal. Do you need a position?"

"Yes..."

"Then wouldn't it be fairer if you gave me your reason for leaving?"

Her eyes flashed her steady gaze. "Mr. Cannon requested it."

"I happen to know that... I mean, I suspect it was evident. Look came into Mark's blue eyes. 'That's why I pinned you down, Miss Sawyer.'"

"Yes, sir?" She looked at him in surprise.

"Sit down there. There was a tone of command in his voice. As Jean seated herself, he dropped into Stewart's chair and looked at her across the desk. "I'm going to put my cards on the table. I'm going to tell you like to do that with people who I think are playing fair. I want your help."

"My help?" It was said in a puzzled fashion.

"When I took over the management here, I made one very specific stipulation. I was to be responsible to you for my employees. As long as I am here, I have to be that way. I do not wish to criticize Mr. Cannon to you, but it seems he must have... forgotten. If you leave under these circumstances, it strikes me as a bit unfair. I think you can see where it puts me. I can't afford it. You'll have to change your mind."

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

On several Wednesday evenings during the past months, I have listened to Mary Pickford as she gave radio broadcasts and I have found the programs interesting. With the help of little plays, each lasting half an hour.

At the beginning of one play, Miss Pickford took the part of a young woman who wanted to go on the stage, and by the end of the hour she had won great success. Of course the short period on the radio stood for weeks and months of hard work. We do not win success in the theater, or in any other field, without care and effort in making ourselves ready.

Even though Mary Pickford has won probably wider fame than any other actress in the moving picture world she works hard on her radio programs, and tries always to make them better. That is an example, I think, for all of us. We may win fine success, but it is better not to "rest on our oars." There is always something new which needs to be done.

I am not what you call a "steady radio fan." Many of the programs, it seems to me, are worth little or nothing, though others are of fine quality. I agree with complaints made by parents that some radio programs for children are of small value, or actually harmful.

As time goes on, I hope that producers will learn that long, careful study should go into programs for boys and girls, as well as for grown folk. Children in general do not care to be called "kiddies," nor do they enjoy having anyone "talk down" to them.

Programs which make young listeners feel that they are good, no matter how "exciting" they may be. Those who have studied the growth of the human mind declare that it harms a person to make him fearful in childhood. Many complaints of parents have been about this type of radio program.

There was considerable switching from January to February contracts, and the market for the 1907, making 2 1/2¢, was the highest this season. Port receipts were 11,432 United States port and 10,073 foreign.

The wool reported a continued annual advance in prices steady on some of the close calling and buying on the part of the markets at Bismarck, Alexandria.

Wheat from North Street said to be in good condition, and the close yesterday's yarn goods up 1/2¢. NEW PRICES STEADY
IN NEW ORLEANS MARKET
NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Cotton was a trifle more active today than yesterday with new crop prices slightly higher. The December contract on which goes out on Monday is firmer due to short covering. The crop months were a shade higher in the afternoon trading owing to government selling. The market was steady on old crop months and a trifle higher on old December and good to October.

The market closed an hour earlier than usual out of respect to the memorial service for Gen. H. H. Hodges, which died Thursday night. The chief of the exchange and their wives attended the funeral in a private home.

Trading was irregular although the market was firmer than usual. Prices stated that there was liquidation of the old crop.

DAILY SHORT STORY

FIRST IN DEATH

Both Wife and Mother Wished to Be His Greatest Love; Over His Deathbed They Encountered.

By S. NEL SMITH.

Consciously, for five years, John had maintained harmony between the two who now hovered over his unconscious form—Anna, his wife, and Ellen, his mother.

No one knew John Inglis, the daring young aviator, better than I, who had ushered him into the lonely, already widowed life of Ellen. He was a fine boy—I loved him, myself—but no mortal should be loved as Ellen and Anna loved John. Ellen loved him with a burning, absorbing intensity that must have penetrated even her dreams.

Ellen had always wanted John to have playmates and friends; her big home was overrun with John's companions, and everybody was happy as long as John had plenty of friends in general. But . . . the minute John's affections became centered on a particular person, whether it was a boy or a girl, that person found himself or herself mysteriously, but effectively, outside the circle.

As John grew older Ellen became more and more absorbed in him, and she was a woman who was a woman's woman in her living and love. She may be a woman of affluence and leisure and lack this homelike gift or she may be a woman who helps to earn the family living and have the gift to a marked degree.

It is using common things commonly well; the making of order, the combining of beauty and comfort. All our spiritual aspirations and desires find expression in the way we discharge our daily duties, and in the way we meet our fellowmen, beginning with our families. A woman's duty is to make her home a home in reality only when she is careful about the earthly things that in themselves seem important yet pieced together make life.

The modern business woman knows this and in spite of the fact that she must leave her apartment or her little house at 9 o'clock in the morning and be away until 6 in the evening she manages to keep an immaculate house and an orderly and efficient up-side down to find this or that. Efficiently in her keynote and because she is efficient she is able to carry on two important jobs.

She arranges her furniture so you don't kick your shins every time you pass from room to room. And while her taste in decoration may leave something to be desired, there is no quarrel with the practicality and convenience of her lay out. She abhors dustcatchers that are neither pretty nor useful. A lamp is not just an ornament in her room but a light to her eyes and it is placed where it throws full gleam on page or cloth. She has green and growing things around her, and she is a friend of wandering Jew—a little feature of deference to beauty. If she can afford it she has an open fireplace for since time immemorial a hearth has been a synonym for home.

With feminine instinct she knows that the meal table is the heart of any house and she is careful not to confine her cooking to heating the contents of cans. You can't catch her throwing sandwiches together at the last minute to be eaten on the fly and washed down with a bottled drink. She may have to sit on a drugstore stool at lunch time, but when evening comes she has provided a dinner and even though it consists of inexpensive cuts and cheap vegetables, it is a hot dinner and a dinner that is dished up with love.

Entertaining friends at meals and having simple parties in the evening without borrowing silver from the neighbors or asking a friend to make her mayonnaise.

Many a leisure woman with nothing to do but attend to her household duties falls lamentably by the wayside. She has so much leisure that she loafs on her job. Her marketing is done in slipshod fashion. The planning of her menu is from hand to mouth. Badly chosen food is poorly prepared and meals are late and at loose ends at the table and dangled over. She entertains friends at meals and has simple parties in the evening without borrowing silver from the neighbors or asking a friend to make her mayonnaise.

Each woman, torn and numb, felt in her heart that she, herself, was John's first thought in life. Would she be his first thought in death?

He was an awful sight as he lay there moaning. We hadn't dared to clean him up; we had only cut away his aviator's suit and shirt to get at him to stanch the flow of blood. There was a chance that the intensity of his pain would recall him to reality, for I dared not give him much morphine.

I looked again at Anna and Ellen. If John did not rise then the marvel that he had created would remain, a living monument to his memory. But if he awakened: What would happen?

The question, seemingly absurd in that room of ghastly, unbelievable suffering, persisted and rankled in my mind. What would John do who had succeeded so gloriously in life, be forced to recognize his failure in death? Bitterly I resented the thought of frustration that John would carry to his grave, and though I am not a church man I prayed that he might not awake.

John drew up his knees and flung his arms in a sudden wild burst of protest. He was driven very close and carry new gas guarantee. Prices greatly reduced.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. You may also write in confidence to Caroline Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Have you ever noticed how the atmosphere of a home strikes you pleasantly, or unpleasantly the moment you enter it? Have you ever realized that it is chiefly the woman who presides over it that determines the atmosphere of that home? Her ability to create a comfortable and convenient place in which to eat and sleep, work and play, live and love makes the home attractive. She may be a woman of affluence and leisure and lack this homelike gift or she may be a woman who helps to earn the family living and have the gift to a marked degree.

NANCY PAGE

Is Your House Decorated for Christmas? Here Are Ideas

By FLORENCE La GANKE.

Nancy and Lois were trying to think of new ways of dressing the house for the holidays. "Of course, Nancy, I don't believe we ever can find anything more appropriate than branches of pine and fir. They seem so eminently fitted for the season. I like to add holly and a bit of mistletoe, of course. But sometimes I wonder whether we try to overdo the decorating and in so doing make the house seem bizarre."

"Well, we have tried enough varieties. Remember the centerpiece made of silver cornucopias filled with white popped corn and those cranberries? Remember the time we used Christmas tree balls in clusters hanging from chandeliers, and side wall lights? Remember the time we sprayed the small fruits, nuts and pineapples with that flat white and used them with Argentine cloth and scarlet ribbons and green swags? That was a stunning decoration."

"I am making some of the ideas I have used before and adding new ones. Here is my scheme. Listen see what you think of it."

"I am going to use two shiny tin star pudding molds on the mantel. Then for the table I'm going to use my large glass bowl. In it I plan to heap Christmas tree balls of all sizes and of all colors. This bowl will be placed on a mirror plateau that will be garlanded with shiny silver Christmas tree ornaments, the kind that have a slender tube at each end and through which the connecting cord runs. And beyond that on the cloth I am placing silver stars. I am going to use shiny green or red or silver paper for formal leaves that will be placed at regular intervals in the bowl of balls. I may use that soft tin-like metal which is glossy, flexible and easily decorated. I am not sure I can get it at this late date in any shop. If not, the silver paper will do unless I decide to introduce the touch of brilliant Christmas red. And of course, I shall have my usual bowl of red and white carnations on the sideboard."

And beyond that on the cloth I am placing silver stars. I am going to use shiny green or red or silver paper for formal leaves that will be placed at regular intervals in the bowl of balls. I may use that soft tin-like metal which is glossy, flexible and easily decorated. I am not sure I can get it at this late date in any shop. If not, the silver paper will do unless I decide to introduce the touch of brilliant Christmas red. And of course, I shall have my usual bowl of red and white carnations on the sideboard."

"I am making some of the ideas I have used before and adding new ones. Here is my scheme. Listen see what you think of it."

"I am going to use two shiny tin star pudding molds on the mantel. Then for the table I'm going to use my large glass bowl. In it I plan to heap Christmas tree balls of all sizes and of all colors. This bowl will be placed on a mirror plateau that will be garlanded with shiny silver Christmas tree ornaments, the kind that have a slender tube at each end and through which the connecting cord runs. DEATH OF ALEXANDER

IS LAID TO RUSSIA
PUTNAM, Conn., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Anastase A. Vonsiatky, of Thompson, president of the executive council of the Russian fascist party of the world, said yesterday he is in possession of reports from secret service agents in Europe which tend to prove King Alexander, of Yugoslavia, was killed by persons hired by the soviet republic. He said the assassination took place so Alexander could not interfere with treaties pending at the time between France and Russia.

Man 13 Years in Prison
Forgets How To Tie Tie

DENVER, Dec. 21.—(AP)—After 13 years in prison, a man can forget how to tie a necktie. This Schmidt discovered today. Schmidt, who was released with Earl Erickson as a result of tuberculosis serum tests they underwent, spent last night with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Menley.

John Schmidt said he is finished dressing. "You'll have to tie this tie for me. I can't do it, it's been so long since I wore one."

THE ONE GREAT GREEN GASOLINE

HIGH-TEST KOOLMOTOR ANTI-KNOCK

GAS

More than a billion gallons sold at a premium... now yours at no extra cost

KOOLMOTOR is the original high-test, anti-knock green gasoline. Motorists bought more than a billion gallons of this great green gasoline at a premium of 2 and 3 cents a gallon. Only recently has it been reduced to regular price. Don't confuse full-firing KOOLMOTOR with ordinary green gasolines. KOOLMOTOR is a high quality motor fuel that represents more than 72 years of petroleum experience. It has always been built up to a quality standard... not down to a price. Contains tetra-ethyl lead. It burns cleanly and evenly in all cylinders. Test a tankful tomorrow. That very first tankful will prove to you why it is called the 'great green gasoline. You'll like its performance... you'll like its economy.
